

PEACE CONFERENCE COMMITTEE AGREES ON CHARLES E. HUGHES

Chicago, June 10.—The peace conferees of the Progressive and Republican conventions today reached an agreement on Justice Charles E. Hughes as the most available candidate for both the Republican and the Progressive nominations for the presidency. The agreement was reached at the eleventh hour, after the Progressive convention had begun its session, and the Progressive conferees undertook to present the name of Justice Hughes to their convention at once.

"The Progressive conferees have agreed to present the name of Justice Hughes to the Progressive convention," said Senator Borah after the conference broke up. "They would not undertake to say what action the convention would take on him as a candidate, but in the interests of peace and harmony they agreed to submit his name. He will be nominated by the Republican convention within an hour after it convenes."

HUGHES NOMINATED ON FIRST BALLOT TAKEN TODAY

Convention Not Called to Order Until 11:51 on Account of Conferences-- Other Candidates Release Their Supporters From Pledges and are Greeted With Cheers--Roll Call Begun at 12:17.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Coliseum, Chicago, June 10.—At exactly 12:20 this afternoon Justice of the Supreme Court Charles Evans Hughes was made the Republican presidential candidate in a convention that was remarkable for the general solemnity of its proceedings.

The nomination was arrived at following the announcement that the Progressive national convention had tabled without consideration the request of the Republican convention that it consider the availability of Justice Hughes as a candidate. And just a few moments before the roll call that nominated the justice was completed the news came from the rival convention that Col. Roosevelt had been nominated by acclamation by the Progressives.

That Col. Roosevelt will refuse to run as the Progressive candidate and will support Justice Hughes if he announces his views on the question of militarism and international affairs in sufficient strength to satisfy the colonel was the opinion of all the leaders. They placed this construction on the letter which Col. Roosevelt sent them today and which was read to the convention.

ROOSEVELT WANTED LODGE NOMINATED

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Oyster Bay, June 10.—Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts is Colonel Roosevelt's choice as a compromise candidate to bring the two warring factions—Progressive and Republican—together in a harmony pact.
The colonel told his visitors today that Lodge was the man who could bring peace to the party, was highly thought of as a man and an efficient public official.
Col. Roosevelt's telegram making this selection was sent to Secretary McGrath at Chicago to be turned over to the Progressive leaders.

HUGHES WILL MAKE STATEMENT

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, June 10.—Justice Hughes this afternoon received at his home news of his nomination by the Republicans. He said:
"I don't know anything about it except what you newspaper men tell me. If it is true, I shall have a statement to make at three o'clock."
Justice Hughes walked downstairs to receive the news from a delegation of newspaper men, who were the first to congratulate him.

PEACE OFFERS MADE TO MOOSE

Given Choice of Hughes, Root, Fairbanks or Cummins, They Seemingly Await Further Orders From Oyster Bay.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Coliseum, Chicago, June 10.—The fate of the proposed fusion of the Republican and Progressive parties still rested in the hands of Colonel Theodore Roosevelt today. The peace conference committee of the two conventions was waiting his final say regarding what was to be done.

The Progressive leaders were told at a conference which did not break up until nearly 3 o'clock this morning that the nomination of Justice Charles Evans Hughes by the Republican convention on the first or second ballot today was a certainty. The "favorite sons" had been well-nigh eliminated and the justice was to get the Sherman strength if early plans were followed. But should the Progressive leaders and Colonel Roosevelt agree upon any one of four men, the Republican peace committee was to appear before the convention and recommend that that individual be named.

The four men in question were Justice Hughes, Elihu Root, Charles Warren Fairbanks or Senator Albert B. Cummins.
The Republican committee unanimously told the Progressive leaders that there was no chance of delivering the Republican convention to Colonel Roosevelt and that unless speedy agreement was reached by the Progressives in accepting one of the quartet, or in suggesting some one as yet unknown to make the race, it would be impossible to hold the Republican convention back from completing its work.

The Progressive conference committee resumed its session in the Perkins suite in the Blackstone Hotel after 8 o'clock today. They planned a final conference with Col. Roosevelt via the long distance 'phone before resuming their sessions with the Republican committee in the carefully guarded premises of the Chicago Club about 9 o'clock.

Not a single member of the committee would express an opinion of what was to be done. They admitted that they had so far failed to reach any agreement with the Republicans although they insisted that the conference which broke up early today had been a most friendly one. The reason that an agreement had not been reached, they said, was that they had been compelled to stick to their position that Col. Roosevelt was their only candidate; that they had no second choice.

The fact that Senator Borah had taken the position on leaving the early conference that he would vote for Justice Hughes on the first ballot today unless some other candidate was agreed upon, had impressed the committee. At the initial conference, and again last night, Borah had said that he wanted Roosevelt or Hughes and that he would take either man if his Republican colleagues could agree upon which one should be named.

While the committee mulled the situation over the delegates waited and "marked time." All of the Republicans were hopeful that the conference might be successful. But the Republicans were much more hopeful than were the "Bull Moose" leaders. The latter in the open continued to assert that the joint nomination of Roosevelt was the only real solution of the troublesome problem confronting the two conventions.

The Progressive members of the committee, confronted by a rapid Roosevelt convention, were inclined to doubt that a final agreement could be reached. Before the joint peace committee got together, George W. Perkins called in his Progressive colleagues for a conference on the position to be taken by the Progressives in the last fight before both conventions nominated. Both sides were certain that the nominations of both conventions would be made before midnight tonight, and the Progressives professed to believe that only Col. Roosevelt could get the votes of the Bull Moose delegates.

Senator Borah of Idaho, the Progressive-Republican member of the Republican conference committee, entered today's conference hopeful of a final peaceful settlement, although he declared that the Progressive conferees would have the "last word." "The mere fact that we are meeting today," said Borah, "proves that a peaceful settlement is possible. The Progressives suggested the name of Theodore Roosevelt. We laid before them the results of yesterday's balloting in the Republican convention. This resulted in a discussion of the four leading candidates. The committee considered that while it had no actual power to agree upon a candidate, the recommendation of the committee on any one of the leading candidates might carry weight enough to insure his nomination. It is certain that both the Republican and Progressive conventions will make their nominations today. Our effort is to reach an agreement before the conventions meet. I favor submitting a definite report to both conventions, no matter what the ultimate outcome of the peace conference may be."

The entire basis surrounding the day's conference was "hope." There was an unanimity of opinion that there was no hope of success in November if a joint candidate could not be agreed upon.
The elimination of the Progressive party was the one thing which kept the radical element of the party in continued opposition to any suggestion of eliminating Roosevelt. It was realized that with him as the standard bearer the party would retain its identity and might again poll more votes than the Republicans in certain states.

Last night's conference was in grave danger of breaking up five minutes after the two committees got together. Through their spokesman, George W. Perkins, the Moose reiterated their ultimatum that Theodore Roosevelt was the only compromise candidate that could be considered. The Republicans called attention to the vote taken in the Republican convention. It was pointed out that Justice Hughes had received 32½ votes, which was 230 more than his highest rival, Elihu Root, and Col. Roosevelt had received only 81, and had gained only 16 on the ballot over his vote at the outset.

Senator Smoot then asked the Progressives who their second choice was.

"We have no second choice," replied Perkins.
A courteous but polite argument followed and it was apparent that no common ground was in sight. The two committees were about to separate when it was suggested that each side have something to eat and talk things over and that then they get together again for another talk. This was done and the ballot that had been taken was analyzed in perfectly friendly fashion. The Republicans explained just why it showed to them that Roosevelt could hardly be made the choice of the convention. The members of the committee expressed their views and the Progressives explained that they were not prepared to do anything until they had conferred with some others of their advisers. At that point the night session broke up.

Senators Borah and Smoot made it very plain before they entered today's conference that the Republican convention was perfectly willing to accept any one of the four names that were suggested by them last night. The Republican leaders were confident that in the present temper of the convention delegates they could swing practically the entire strength to any one of the men. The Progressives were understood to favor the quartet in about the following relation: Cummins, Fairbanks and Root, with no decision on Hughes because of the fact that no one had been authorized to voice his views.

The conference did not go into the question of second place on the ticket at all. That would easily be settled when the agreement on who was to head it was reached. Senator Borah is being urged to make the race and can be named almost without opposition. But he has said and still maintains that he thinks he can be much more useful to the party in his present position.

Frank Hitchcock, the Hughes manager, was jubilant today. He declared that he was completely confident that even though the Progressive committee should decline to accept Hughes—and he insisted that Hughes already "was over" there was little chance of Col. Roosevelt accepting the nomination in the face of the Republican platform which has received almost unanimous approval from the Republican newspapers of the country. Hitchcock believes that eventually Col. Roosevelt will be found lined up behind Hughes and smiled broadly when his attention was called to Gov. Johnson's hint that Col. Roosevelt was ready to quit the Moose for his love, the Republican party.

The swing of Sherman to Hughes also pleased Hitchcock. He believed that this must impress the Progressives party leaders as it would show them that the bad wagon rush was on. The switch of the Illinois delegation came early today. David Shanahan, Mayor Thompson of Chicago, Walter Rosenfeld and others of his managers reported the proceedings of the convention over the long distance telephone to the senator and asked him what he wanted to do. "We should support Hughes," said the senator. "He stands for all that I believe and would be an ideal candidate."

PAYN AND ELTING VOTED FOR ROOT

Philip Elting, chairman of the Ulster county Republican committee, and Louis F. Payn of Chatham, Columbia county, who are the two delegates to the Republican national convention from the Twenty-seventh congressional district, both voted for Elihu Root for the nomination for president on each of the two ballots which were taken at Chicago Friday evening.

Of the eighty-seven votes in the New York state delegation, Governor Whitman, who has been behind Justice Hughes's boom for president, lined up forty-two delegates; Elihu Root receiving forty-three votes from New York and Colonel Roosevelt receiving two votes. The two Roosevelt votes were cast by Francis Hendricks and Willard Rill, both of Syracuse, who are the delegates from the Thirty-fifth district.

The second ballot showed a gain of one vote for Justice Hughes from New York state, Thomas H. Proctor of Ulster, changing from Root to Hughes, the remaining delegates voting the same as they did on the first ballot.

Congressman George W. Fairchild of Oneonta, Senator Harvey D. Hinman and Edward Vreeland, three of the delegates, were absent on account of illness and their alternates voted for them. Congressman Fairchild's alternate voted for Root and child's alternate voted for Hughes. Mr. Vreeland's alternate also voted for Hughes.

The New York delegates' vote on the first ballot was as follows:
Roosevelt—Francis Hendricks and Willard Rill. Total, 2.

Root—Senator James Wadsworth, Jr., Senator Elton H. Brown, J. H. DeBrage, T. H. Burden, Robert R. Lawson, Adolph Levy, William Prendergast, William Berri, Alfred E. Vaas, Michael J. Dady, M. B. Campbell, C. S. Warbassa, Frank Ehlers, F. H. Luce, George Cromwell, Chauncey M. Depew, Otto T. Bannard, Job Hedges, Henry L. Stimson, Beverly R. Robinson, James R. Sheffield, Charles B. Hilles, Nicholas Murray Butler, George E. Sheldon, William Ten Eyck, John J. Knewitz, William S. Bennett, T. W. Whittle, William B. Thompson, Philip Elting, Louis F. Payn, Henry M. Sage, Ellis J. Staley, Cyrus Durey, Samuel Wallin, Homer P. Snyder, Thomas R. Proctor, Jacob Sloat Fassett, William Watson, J. C. Curtis, Andrew T. McNaught, Norman J. Gould and Clyde Knapp. Total, 43.

Hughes—Governor Charles S. Whitman, Frederick C. Tanner, G. F. Doughty, William F. Flannagan, John MacCrater, William M. Calder, F. J. H. Kracke, Jacob Brenner, Clarence B. Smith, Baruch Miller, Samuel S. Koenig, F. L. Marshall, Herbert Parsons, Martin Steinhilf, William H. Douglas, William Bondy, Ogden L. Mills, Samuel Kruswetch, Valentine J. Hahn, Daniel W. Whitmore, William L. Ward, Henry R. Barrett, John B. Rose, Willet E. Hoysradt, Lewis A. Emerson, Harry A. Lewis, Bertrand E. Snell, Walter C. Witherbee, Thaddeus C. Sweet, James Moore, William J. Tully, George W. Aldridge, James L. Hotchkiss, John A. Merritt, John Lord O'Brien, George P. Urban, Harry J. Knepper, Edward W. Hodson, August Ebke, Frank S. Smith, Charles M. Hamilton and James P. Hill. Total, 42.

Two party leaders as it would show them that the bad wagon rush was on. The switch of the Illinois delegation came early today. David Shanahan, Mayor Thompson of Chicago, Walter Rosenfeld and others of his managers reported the proceedings of the convention over the long distance telephone to the senator and asked him what he wanted to do. "We should support Hughes," said the senator. "He stands for all that I believe and would be an ideal candidate."

The word immediately was passed to the Sherman rooters and the rush to Hughes was started. Hitchcock also said that the various western states which had been dividing their votes with Root and paying compliments to favorite sons, were now in the Hughes camp.

The Burton and Fairbanks strength is sure to come to us also," declared Hitchcock. "And Governor Whitman expects the Root men in his delegation to swing into line. We consider it all over but the shouting."

MOOSE NOMINATE COL. ROOSEVELT

Auditorium, Chicago, June 10.—The Progressive convention adopted the amended platform and listened to a statement by George W. Perkins and the reading of the telegram from Col. Roosevelt advocating the nomination of Senator Crane. The conference committee report agreeing to present the name of Justice Hughes was read.

Nominations were declared in order and an effort was made to suspend the rules and make nominations without a roll call. This was objected to by Mr. Fish of New York and turned down by the New York delegation by a vote of 32 to 55.

The nomination was made amid the most exciting scenes, and it was followed by a mighty demonstration. Henry J. Allen, immediately after he had learned the Republicans had nominated Justice Hughes, said he knew that Col. Roosevelt would accept the Progressive nomination.
Theodore Roosevelt was unanimously nominated for president of the United States by the Progressive convention this afternoon at 12:31 o'clock.

The KITCHEN CABINET

ATTRACTIVE EGG DISHES.

No man is useless while he has a friend.
What an absurd thing it is to pass over all the valuable parts of a man, and fix our attention on his infirmities.—Addison.

Eggs are reasonable in price and this is the time to enjoy many of the dishes which are prohibitive many months of the year.

Escalloped Eggs.—Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter and when bubbling hot add two tablespoonfuls of flour; add a cupful and a half of milk, and cook slowly until thick. Butter a baking dish and place in the bottom a layer of buttered crumbs, over these lay three thinly sliced eggs; cover with half of a fourth of a cupful of chopped olives and repeat with crumbs and three more eggs, olives and then the white sauce. Cover with buttered crumbs. Salt and pepper should be used to season the white sauce and a cupful and a half of crumbs will be needed. Bake until nicely browned.

Jam Omelet.—Beat the yolks of five eggs until light and lemon colored; add a tablespoonful of powdered sugar, and three tablespoonfuls of milk mixed with a teaspoonful of cornstarch. Fold in the stiffly beaten whites of eggs and cook in a buttered frying pan until set, then spread with jam and fold; serve as a dessert. Sprinkle with powdered sugar and garnish with jam.

Coffee Custard.—Scald two cupfuls of milk with two tablespoonfuls of ground coffee; strain after it is well steeped, add three beaten eggs, a fourth of a cupful of sugar, a pinch of salt. Strain into cups and set in hot water to bake until firm. Flavor with a few drops of vanilla or coffee extract.

Lacto.—Beat two eggs, add two cupfuls of sugar and four and a half cupfuls of sour milk, a half cupful each of any desired fruit (such as cherry, grape, strawberry, raspberry) and lemon juice. Mix in the order given and freeze as ice cream. This is one of the most refreshing and wholesome of frozen dishes. Buttermilk is often used in place of sour milk, making a richer ice than with plain milk.

Chopped hard cooked eggs added to a white sauce and served on buttered toast makes a most satisfying dish for luncheon or supper.

Expert Advice For the Automobile Owner

Queries and Replies Covering Matters of Importance to the Man Who Runs a Car

In a thermo siphon why cannot one cool it by forcing the air in at the bottom hose connections and allowing it to come out of the top hose connection with the radiator removed, provided sufficient air is forced through?

The arrangement which you mention should be successful provided sufficient air could be forced through the cooling system. However, it would be impossible to force air through rapidly enough to keep the exterior of the cylinder walls cool, as the metal within the jackets is not of such shape as to transmit the heat from the metal to the air rapidly enough, nor would the jackets be able to carry a sufficient volume of air.

My four cylinder car knocks and pounds on a pull with retarded spark.
 It misfires when the current indicator begins to fluctuate. A new coil and platinum points have been installed.
 Is it possible that the relay is not right? The battery stands up well.
 Could it be a spark knock, and, if so, what is the cause? Would raising the block one-eighth of an inch benefit it or would it lower its power?

This is probably a spark knock. You must have the spark retarded too far.
 Try advancing it a little more on such a pull. There may be a great deal of carbon in the engine. It would be well to examine the spark plugs to see that they are not sooted.

Raising the cylinder block would give you more space in the combustion chamber, thus reducing the compres-sion and consequently the power output.

I would like to know something about the properties of gasoline as a lubricant. Would a large size bearing which is constantly bathed in gasoline, revolving at a speed not over sixty or seventy revolutions per minute, with a light load, be likely to heat up if no lubricant other than gasoline were used?

High grade gasoline has no lubricating qualities. In other words, it has no viscosity. The function of a lubricant is to separate metal surfaces and prevent friction, which produces heat. High grade gasoline is very volatile and evaporates readily, leaving no residue. The lower grades contain more or less crude oil, and possibly you have in mind the use of the lower grades.

What size of wire is used on the ar-mature of most magnetos, and how much wire is used? Also, what is the voltage of a magneto and the amperage?

Some authorities advise the use of one-half to three-quarters pound of No.
 20 double cotton covered wire. Of course the amount and size differ. As an indication of the width of variation it may be said that in the line made by one magneto manufacturer, which includes 300 or more, not more than half a dozen have the same windings. This is a matter upon which the magneto maker very reluctantly gives information.

Voltage varies from 8,000 to 30,000, and there is a great difference in amperage also, the low tension having a greater amperage than the high tension.

Which will run the fastest, a four, six, eight or twelve cylinder car, size of wheels, gear ratio, cylinder displacement and everything being equal?

That depends entirely upon the design and mechanical excellence of the car. Two motors of exactly the same type and size might have very different performance for the reason that one was better designed than the other.
 So there is no basis of comparison.

Are aluminum pistons a success?
 What changes would I have to make other than changing pistons? How about the connecting rods, etc.?

Aluminum pistons have been adopted by many of the leading automobile makers after long test. The aluminum pistons can be used satisfactorily with the regular rods in the engine, if that is what you mean.

Kindly explain why valves are reground by alternating rotary motion, in view of the fact that valve tappets are arranged to give the valves a slightly continuous rotary motion in service. Also what are the objections to the continuous rotary motion in re-grinding?

Valves are ground by an alternating rotary motion to avoid scoring the seats or the valves themselves. You know that if you were sandpapering a finely finished piece of wood, such as an automobile body, preparatory to painting it you would not draw the sandpaper around in a continuous path, for that would leave ridges or scratches. The same applies to grinding valves.

Will you please explain the correct method of refinishing fenders and hood on a high grade car?

If the hood and fenders are smooth and are simply dull from weather no preliminary sandpapering or smoothing will be needed, but you can best judge that yourself. With the surfaces as smooth as required, the first step is to apply a coat of metal primer.
 This should be allowed to dry overnight, after which the first coat of rough stuff or filler should be applied.
 Let stand for twenty-four hours and then rub down with a rubbing stone and water. Then another coat of this primer should be put on and the procedure repeated. Following this rubbing the surface should resemble a slate in smoothness. You are now ready for the ground color, which is a flat color put on to give a foundation for the color varnish. It should, of course, be of a shade to correspond with the desired final appearance of the car. Then a coat of color varnish is applied, and after dry the rubbing with rubbing stone and water is again in order. Finally put on a coat of clear finishing varnish that is of the right shade to correspond with the color. This is a lengthy procedure and, of course, could be simplified if you did not want a very fine finish. However, if the above directions are followed the metal surfaces should look like new.

My magneto does not distribute a very strong fire to the plugs. At times
 I can start the motor easily; then, again, I have a hard time starting it.
 Can you tell me what is the matter?

Probably the magnets have become weak. Take the magneto to a repair man who knows how to do the work and have the magnets renewed. If there is no shop in your town where this can be done ship the magneto to the factory.

What causes sparks to appear in the brush holder assembly when the throttle is opened about halfway? Is this harmful to the generator?

The sparks probably originate from a dirty commutator or from improper brush adjustment. This should be remedied at once.

I have been having brake trouble due to too small brake drums. The drums are only 12 1/2 by 2 inches and are much too small for a 3,000 pound car. I want to equip it with 16 by 2 or 2 1/2 brakes if it is possible to obtain a pair of this size drums bored for two inch hubs.
 I can do the fitting and think I can work over the old brake connections without much expense. What do you think of this plan?

It would be entirely practical to do this, although we do not know where you could get such a set of drums already made. It is probable that you would have to have them made to your order. Remember that you do not want to get them so large that they will interfere with the road clearance of the car.

Do you recommend removing carbon while the engine is running by means of warm water slowly fed through a primer connected to the intake manifold?

We do not believe that this would have very beneficial results, although it would do no harm. Warm water would not serve to dislodge much of the deposit.

What is a universal joint, and what is its use?

A universal joint is a connector between two shafts, allowing them to operate at any angle to one another within practical limitations.

Would it be practical to build a two cylinder, opposed, stationary engine with both cylinders firing at the same time?

It would not be practical, although it could be done. By having both cylinders fire at the same time you would have the same effect as a single cylinder engine of a size equal to the sum of the two cylinders, and then this impulse would have to carry the engine through two revolutions. So the cylinders should be arranged to fire alternately in order that there be an impulse every revolution. By firing both at once you simply defeat the purpose for which you have two cylinders.

What is the meaning of brake horsepower and piston displacement?

Brake horsepower is that measured at the flywheel of the motor and is the useful work done by it. Piston displacement is the total cubical area of the cylinders between the head of the pistons, when at their lowest point, and the top of the cylinders.

Is kerosene a practical substitute for water in the radiator of a car? Would it rot the rubber hose connections?

Kerosene alone in the cooling system soon would cause overheating of the motor. Besides, dangerous gases would be generated, and no doubt the water connections, if made of rubber, would be affected. Kerosene mixed with water in the proportions of two-thirds water and one-third kerosene has been tried, but the results obtained were not as good as with alcohol and water.

Will you kindly describe the process of lapping piston rings in cylinders?

In the factories the piston rings are lapped in on the pistons, and in most cases this simply means the running of the engine for several hours by external power. Usually a belt from an overhead drive shaft is placed over the flywheel and the engine driven thus until all parts are run in. Lapping in the rings in a repair shop should be done in the same way. Assemble them on the pistons and while using a good supply of oil drive the motor by external power for several hours if possible.

Production and Price

Do the great variety of Sixes and the fluctuating prices seem confusing and perplexing?

Let's reason it out.

What controls price? Production.

As a manufacturer's production increases, his production cost, per car, decreases.

Therefore the plant with the largest production is in a position to give more of everything and charge less for it.

We are the world's largest producers of Six and Four Cylinder Automobiles.

Consequently you get in the Overland Six a larger and more powerful motor—a longer wheelbase—the convenience of electric control buttons on the steering column and an almost endless list of other comforts and refinements.

—yet what is the price?

Not $1200 or $1300 but $1145.

And when it comes to a Six Cylinder performance, remember the Overland Six is the star of them all.

One ride will convince you.

The arrangement which you mention should be successful provided sufficient air could be forced through the cooling system. Are aluminum pistons a success? What changes would I have to make other than changing pistons? How about the connecting rods, etc.?

Aluminum pistons have been adopted by many of the leading automobile makers after long test. The aluminum pistons can be used satisfactorily with the regular rods in the engine, if that is what you mean.

Kindly explain why valves are re-ground by alternating rotary motion, in view of the fact that valve tappets are arranged to give the valves a slightly continuous rotary motion in service. Also what are the objections to the continuous rotary motion in re-grounding?

Valves are ground by an alternating rotary motion to avoid scoring the seats or the valves themselves. You know that if you were sandpapering a finely finished piece of wood, such as an automobile body, preparatory to painting it you would not draw the sandpaper around in a continuous path, for that would leave ridges or scratches. The same applies to grinding valves.

Will you please explain the correct method of refinishing fenders and hood on a high grade car?

If the hood and fenders are smooth and are simply dull from weather no preliminary sandpapering or smoothing will be needed, but you can best judge that yourself. With the surfaces as smooth as required, the first step is to apply a coat of metal primer. This should be allowed to dry overnight, after which the first coat of rough stuff or filler should be applied. Let stand for twenty-four hours and then rub down with a rubbing stone and water. Then another coat of this primer should be put on and the procedure repeated. Following this rubbing the surface should resemble a slate in smoothness. You are now ready for the ground color, which is a flat color put on to give a foundation for the color varnish. It should, of course, be of a shade to correspond with the desired final appearance of the car. Then a coat of color varnish is applied, and after dry the rubbing with rubbing stone and water is again in order. Finally put on a coat of clear finishing varnish that is of the right shade to correspond with the color. This is a lengthy procedure and, of course, could be simplified if you did not want a very fine finish. However, if the above directions are followed the metal surfaces should look like new.

My magneto does not distribute a very strong fire to the plugs. At times I can start the motor easily; then, again, I have a hard time starting it. Can you tell me what is the matter?

Probably the magnets have become weak. Take the magneto to a repair man who knows how to do the work and have the magnets renewed. If there is no shop in your town where this can be done ship the magneto to the factory.

What causes sparks to appear in the brush holder assembly when the throttle is opened about halfway? Is this harmful to the generator?

The sparks probably originate from a dirty commutator or from improper brush adjustment. This should be remedied at once.

I have been having brake trouble due to too small brake drums. The drums are only 12 1/2 by 2 inches and are much too small for a 3,000 pound car. I want to equip it with 16 by 2 or 2 1/2 brakes if it is possible to obtain a pair of this size drums bored for two inch hubs. I can do the fitting and think I can work over the old brake connections without much expense. What do you think of this plan?

It would be entirely practical to do this, although we do not know where you could get such a set of drums already made. It is probable that you would have to have them made to your order. Remember that you do not want to get them so large that they will interfere with the road clearance of the car.

Do you recommend removing carbon while the engine is running by means of warm water slowly fed through a primer connected to the intake manifold?

We do not believe that this would have very beneficial results, although it would do no harm. Warm water would not serve to dislodge much of the deposit.

What is a universal joint, and what is its use?

A universal joint is a connector between two shafts, allowing them to operate at any angle to one another within practical limitations.

Would it be practical to build a two cylinder opposed stationary engine with both cylinders firing at the same time?

It would not be practical, although it could be done. By having both cylinders fire at the same time you would have the same effect as a single cylinder engine of a size equal to the sum of the two cylinders, and then this impulse would have to carry the engine through two revolutions. So the cylinders should be arranged to fire alternately in order that there be an impulse every revolution. By firing both at once you simply defeat the purpose for which you have two cylinders.

What is the meaning of brake horsepower and piston displacement?

Brake horsepower is that measured at the flywheel of the motor and is the useful work done by it. Piston displacement is the total cubical area of the cylinders between the head of the pistons, when at their lowest point, and the top of the cylinders.

Is kerosene a practical substitute for water in the radiator of a car? Would it rot the rubber hose connections?

Kerosene alone in the cooling system soon would cause overheating of the motor. Besides, dangerous gases would be generated, and no doubt the water connections, if made of rubber, would be affected. Kerosene mixed with water in the proportions of two-thirds water and one-third kerosene has been tried, but the results obtained were not as good as with alcohol and water.

Will you kindly describe the process of lapping piston rings in cylinders?

In the factories the piston rings are lapped in on the pistons, and in most cases this simply means the running of the engine for several hours by external power. Usually a belt from an overhead drive shaft is placed over the flywheel and the engine driven thus until all parts are run in. Lapping in the rings in a repair shop should be done in the same way. Assemble them on the pistons and while using a good supply of oil drive the motor by external power for several hours if possible.

Production and Price

Do the great variety of Sixes and the fluctuating prices seem confusing and perplexing?

Let's reason it out.

What controls price? Production.

As a manufacturer's production increases, his production cost, per car, decreases.

Therefore the plant with the largest production is in a position to give more of everything and charge less for it.

We are the world's largest producers of Six and Four Cylinder Automobiles.

Consequently you get in the Overland Six a larger and more powerful motor—a longer wheelbase—the convenience of electric control buttons on the steering column and an almost endless list of other comforts and refinements.

—yet what is the price?

Not $1200 or $1300 but $1145.

And when it comes to a Six Cylinder performance, remember the Overland Six is the star of them all.

One ride will convince you.

Tennyson's First Acceptance.

Mr. Arthur Symonds has been confessing that his first poem was written at the age of nine. Tennyson began even earlier, for his first remembered lines were composed when he was only five. One of his earliest attempts was an elegy upon his grandmother, which he showed his grandfather. The old man put ten shillings into the boy's hand and said: "There, that is the first money you have earned by your poetry, and, believe me, it will be the last."

KINGSTON, N. Y., JUNE 10, 1916.

We often wonder what the Man from Mars, concerning whose views there is so much speculation among philosophers, would think about one of our political conventions—particularly the feature of artificial cheering. No normal man is really so enthusiastic over the prospect of putting some other man into office that he feels like yelling and waving his arms for a period anywhere from twenty minutes to an hour and a half in length. Neither do such demonstrations make votes. Yet political managers seem to think it important to "break the record" for duration of senseless noise. It is among the possibilities that we shall yet hear of a twenty-four hour long spasm of screaming, bawling and howling in some future convention. On the other hand, it may be that the practice will be dropped by unanimous consent because of a realization of its absurdity. Let us hope this will be the case.

A poll of the people of the United States on the question of whether American rights ought to be upheld would be edifying in view of the situation which has existed in Mexico for several years. The latest outrage perpetrated by Mexican bandits is the burning of the United States consulate in Durango City, which suffered from an anti-American riot. The despatches from El Paso state that the rabble first attacked the consulate, trampled the flag in the streets and then applied the torch. Durango from the beginning of the Mexican trouble has been stated to be the home of many Mexican bandits, so that the attack, although conducted by residents of the town, may safely be said to have been inspired by the bandit. The two national political platforms already adopted express horror of the acts of the bandits. What will the Democratic platform say? What attitude can the party which nominates Wilson take in the matter? It cannot condemn but it must condone his policy of surrendering American rights, not only in Mexico but on United States soil, where the lives of American citizens are supposed to be inviolate from foreign attack. If the officials whom the United States has recognized as the de facto government of Mexico are not in sympathy with the bandits, they are too weak to deal with them. Certainly the Mexican military forces stationed in close proximity to our punitive expedition are spending more time in watching American troops than in seeking to capture Villa and the bandit bands of other leaders. Our own army is marking time because it is insufficient to deal with anyone with a commanding strength that would insure respect. Americans are not looking for a fight, but after turning the other cheek after the first has been struck the Wilson administration is allowing them to be kicked around, apparently on the theory that the kick is not misplaced according to the Wilsonian rules.

For real inconsistency the city of Altoona, Wisconsin, must be awarded the palm among municipalities. On July first the four saloons which now help to quench the thirst of the residents of Altoona will go out of business and their places will be taken by a municipally owned saloon with whose profits the city plans to build a municipal waterworks. Under all the precepts of Prohibition the patron of a saloon does not drink water and by frequenting the saloon he soon comes to a condition where he does not use it externally either. When the city has acquired sufficient funds out of its saloon to finish the waterworks system, will it close the saloon and go on the water wagon in order that the saloon patrons will have enough left out of their weekly wages to pay water taxes, or will the privately owned establishments be allowed to reopen? Will the city discharge a city employee for neglect of business resulting from drinking at the bar of its own saloon? He certainly will have a good excuse for demanding reinstatement if he claims he was merely trying to swell the city coffers by his patronage in order to hasten the day when the saloon would be abolished and pure drinking water would take the place of liquor. While waiting for water, what will the city bartenders do when the liquor purchased in the open market is decided to be too strong for ordinary use unless diluted behind the bar or in the cellar? American municipal government is becoming so complex that books by experts are scarcely off the press before it becomes necessary for some other expert to produce an entirely new book. The Altoona plan is bound to make government more complex by the tangles which will arise from a municipally owned saloon. But in the meantime what has become of the Prohibition party in Wisconsin?

COUNTRY IS SAFE.

Its Future Peace Insured by Little Marjorie's Battleship.

The levity of the New York Evening Sun in referring in its column known as "The Sun Dial" to the battleship which is to be built by ten-cent subscriptions collected by the New York Tribune and other newspapers is quite alarming, and if it spreads, there is a strong likelihood that subscribers will be asked to increase the amount of their subscriptions, which might result in arousing sufficient public sentiment to cause congress to make an appropriation that will meet the needs of the United States. The Sun says:

No matter what the immediate future may hold in the way of wars, or rumors of wars, and preparation for the same, the naval prestige of the country, in the long run, is safe.

Our friend and neighbor, the Tribune, that excellent and patriotic newspaper, has attended to that. We refer specifically to Little Marjorie's Battleship.

The fund started for Little Marjorie's Battleship is not more than six months old, and already between $20,000 and $25,000 has been collected.

Roughly speaking, the money is coming in at the rate of $100,000 a year. Or, let us say, $100,000 every two years—$1,000,000 every twenty years.

We are sure that the Tribune would not think of offering the nation a battleship costing less than $10,000,000.

In 200 years Little Marjorie's Battleship will be an accomplished fact.

But the effect of Little Marjorie's Battleship will be felt the world around long before the ship itself is launched. There is the continuing psychological effect to be reckoned with. During the next two centuries the fact that such a vessel is building should have a vast deterrent influence upon any government rash enough or wicked enough to consider declaring war upon the United States.

We can imagine the question of such a declaration of war coming up at a government council in Italy, or Germany, or England, about the year 2018. The statesmen are calculating the chances of victory—in some manner, the information has reached Europe that America is not prepared for war, and they are wondering whether this report is true. Finally a reverend graybeard rises and delivers a solemn warning:

"Outwardly," he says, "America may seem to be unprepared. But, secretly, she has been preparing for more than a century now. Have you never heard of Little Marjorie's Battleship? For a hundred years America has been steadily, determinedly, inexorably, building up that magnificent reserve. Within another century—well, within two hundred years at least—that ship will be launched. We might strike swiftly and defeat America this year, it is true—but think of the terrible revenge that America would take when Little Marjorie's Battleship is in commission! My advice is prudence."

We hope—and we feel sure that such will be the case—that the Tribune, as it deserves, will survive to see Little Marjorie's Battleship launched. Looking forward to the day when it will look back on those two centuries of the gradual, unflinching development of its idea, so prettily patriotic and so charmingly sentimental, the Tribune may well congratulate itself.

If some means could be devised to hold back the flood of contributions and spread them over yet another century, it would be a pleasant thing to have a Tercentenary Celebration of the Day when the First Contribution for Little Marjorie's battleship was received.

Not the Day for Chicken.

Little May was sent to call her father for supper. He was talking with some friends over the front fence. May was anxious to get her father in to supper, and one of the men noticing this, said to her: "You must have something good for supper to-night. What is it, chicken?" May looked quickly up and answered: "Oh, no, sir; today ain't Sunday."

Truly Disappointed.

The minister hurried down the aisle and grasped the stranger's hand. "I am glad to see you with us tonight," he said. "I can see by the expression on your face that you are laboring under some deep sorrow, some great disappointment." "You're right; I came in here thinking this was a movie, and, having got in, I didn't have the nerve to get up and walk out."

A Mistake.

A senator was talking about preparedness and armor plate.

"The armor plate people," he said, "have threatened that if the government establishes a national armor plate plant, they will shut up their own plants."

"They who think that this threat traps the government are in error. The government is no more trapped than Lush was."

"Lush, the well-known clubman, was on the way home from the club at 3 or 4 o'clock in the morning. There were no cabs about, so poor Lush had to walk. He walked, of course, zigzag. It was very dark. After a time he came to a treebox, and he took hold of it and rested."

"It was one of those tree boxes made of upright iron bars. Lush, feeling the bars with both hands, made his way round it. Bars—endless iron bars. He groaned."

"'Damn it!' he said, sinking down on the pavement with his back to the bars and preparing to go asleep. 'Damn it—arrested again!'"—Washington Star.

War's Amenities.

Col. E. M. House was talking about Europe in war time.

"They're telling a wartime story in London now," he said. "It's a story about an individual in flashy dress, who stood on a crowded corner in the Strand for such a long time that a policeman finally got suspicious."

"'What are you waitin' around 'ere for?' he asked."

"'Waitin' for a 'bus,' the man replied, with dignity."

"'Garn!' said the policeman. 'More'n 20 'buses 'as gone by since you've been waitin' 'ere.'"

"'I know,' said the man, with a wink, 'but not the one with the pretty conductor on, me boy.'"

A Hard Snorer.

The Marquis of Aberdeen, now with his wife, Lady Aberdeen, in this country on a sociological visit, was some 20 years ago Governor General of Canada and during his term of office one of his particular delights was to travel about the Dominion and the United States incognito to the limit. The marquis loves to tell a joke on himself no less than on some other victim and he tells this one with much glee:

During one of his trips he was on a Pullman somewhere in our northwest when a raw westerner went at him for a talk. "Stranger in these parts?" said the native for an opening.

"Yes, rather." "Fine country this is, don't you think?" "Yes, rather." "Looking for anything?"

"Perhaps." "How much money have you got to spend?" "Oh, I can't say exactly don't you know but about $50,000 a year." (This is the salary of the Governor General.)

The westerner threw up his hands in astonishment. "Good Lord, man," he exclaimed, "if I had as much money as you've got and snored like you I'd hire a private car."—W. J. Lampton in Judge.

A Latter Day Romance.

The gas was turned low in the conservatory and the strains of the orchestra music floated in from the adjoining room. Clarice, the millionaire pork packer's daughter, was a dream that night and Harold knew that the psychological moment had arrived. Tenderly he leaned over the divan and whispered in her shell-like ear (she had two ears but he used only one):

"Darling, will you be mine?" "Are you sure that you can keep me in the manner to which I have been accustomed?" she replied coyly, yet sadly.

"It's a pipe," he replied.

"Can you afford to let me have an egg for breakfast every other Sunday morning?"

"Yes."

"Can we have roast beef at least once a month?"

"Probably."

"Then take me, Harold, for I am yours!"

And he took her, but he had lied to her most shamefully.—New York Tribune.

Spots on Furniture.

Essence of peppermint, applied with a soft cloth, will successfully remove the white spots that so frequently mar highly polished surfaces on furniture. Furniture polish ordinarily will not do the work, especially when used on the surface of a piano or any other hand-rubbed mahogany surface. A few drops on a cheesecloth rag, rubbed vigorously, will wipe out the spots.

COMMON AMERICAN BIRDS.

INTERESTING INFORMATION ABOUT THEM SUPPLIED BY THE BUREAU OF BIOLOGICAL SURVEY OF THE UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

RUSSET-BACKED THRUSH

(Hyalocichla ustulata)

Length, seven and one-fourth inches. Among thrushes having the top of head and tail nearly the same color as the back, this one is distinguished by its tawny eye-rings and cheeks. The Pacific coast subspecies is russet brown above, while the other subspecies is the olive-backed thrush. The remarks below apply to the species as a whole.

Range: Breeds in the forested parts of Alaska and Canada and south to California, Colorado, Michigan, New York, West Virginia (mountains), and Maine; winters from Mexico to South America.

Habits and economic status: This is one of a small group of thrushes the members of which are by many ranked first among American song-birds. The several members resemble one another in size, plumage, and habits. While this thrush is very fond of fruit, its partiality for the neighborhood streams keeps it from frequenting orchards far from water. It is most troublesome during the cherry season, when the young are in the nest. From this it might be inferred that the young are fed on fruit, but such is not the case. The adults eat fruit, but the nestlings, as usual, are fed mostly upon insects. Beetles constitute the largest item of animal food, and ants come next. Many caterpillars also are eaten. The great bulk of vegetable food consists of fruit, of which two-fifths is of cultivated varieties. Where these birds live in or near gardens or orchards, they may do considerable damage, but they are too valuable as insect destroyers to be killed if the fruit can be protected in any other way.

Raised Decorations on Eggshells.

It is easy to work out a design in relief on an eggshell, whether the contents of the egg have been removed or not. The first step is to draw with a pencil the design or the lettering that you wish to appear on the egg. Make only an outline and the leading points of the design. Then melt a small quantity of candle wax in a shallow tin and let it set a little, but while it is still soft take it out of the tin and spread it over the design on the egg. If there is any difficulty in getting the wax to hold touch it here and there with the heated blade of a penknife.

Take vinegar enough to cover the egg completely and soak the egg in it for a period that may be half an hour or may be an hour and a half, according to the strength of the vinegar. At the end of that period take the egg out and peel off the wax. The design will then stand up in relief against the rest of the shell, for the acid of the vinegar will have eaten away the uncovered part and left untouched only that part which the wax protected.—Youth's Companion.

Tippling in Constantinople.

The tippling evil is no joke even in this country. But it has hardly reached the degree of insidiousness marked by this tale from the near east:

"On the morning of my departure from Constantinople I gave the letter carrier who had brought my letters during my sojourn here half a medshid as a tip."

"In the afternoon a man came up to me and said: 'My lord, I am a stranger to you. You never received a telegram. But may it please you to know that I am the telegraph messenger. May it please you to know that it was up to me to deliver telegrams to you if such had been received for you in our office. I surely would have brought them to you most quickly. I know you will be just and you will not harm a man who has always been ready to serve you. I cannot be blamed that I have never been called upon to be of service to you. I, too, deserve half a medshid.'"

—Bruno's Weekly.

Masking the Guns.

Against air craft observation one of the first precautions taken is to splash guns, limbers and ammunition wagons with different neutral dints so that they will blend with the ground about them. Any earthworks, pits, etc., that are erected or dug are strewn with leaves and branches and the earth disturbed generally, so that from above nothing unusual shall be spotted by keen eyed air men.

A battery of guns is seldom placed along the sky line, for there it is an easy mark. Generally the guns are concealed some distance down the incline in front of the sky line, unless the guns are howitzers, in which case they can be best served from behind the ridge. The idea of placing the guns in front of the ridge is that the rising ground behind them serves as an effectual screen, as the guns themselves are painted to represent earth and foliage.—London Standard.

Affecting Electric Current.

It has been found that oil in sand or earth causes it to have a very high resistance to the flow of an electrical current, while, on the other hand, certain ores in the earth cause it to have a very low resistivity.

To Relieve Fatigue.

When a woman is very tired she will find one of the best processes of refreshing herself is to wring out hot cloths and lay them over her eyes and forehead. A hot water bag does not act as a substitute for this, and the treatment is a little trouble. The simplest way is to have two cloths and a basin of hot water ready to wring out and replace the one that becomes cool on the head.

Women Spoil Watches.

It is a notorious fact that watches owned by women are less accurate than those carried by men. The cause for this can be directly assigned to the irregularity with which women wind their watches and the frequency with which they allow them to run down.

He Wanted to Know.

The late E. H. Harriman, says the Wall Street Journal, was a stickler for facts. He cared little for an approximate statement. When he asked his employees for information he wanted it definite.

While traveling through Nevada one day with a number of the officials of the Union Pacific the train passed a little station with much platform, a bleak background of sagebrush and junipers and no habitation within sight.

"What is that station there for?" asked Mr. Harriman of one of the railway officials with the party.

"They ship a few cattle and two or three cars of wool."

"Which is it, two or three?" snapped Mr. Harriman. "Which is it? There is a difference of 33 1-3 per cent."

Foolish Believers in Luck.

Shallow men believe in luck, believe in circumstances. It was somebody's name, or he happened to be there at the time, or it was so then, and another day it would have been otherwise. Strong men believe in cause and effect. The man who is born to do it, and his father was born to do it, and looking narrowly, you shall see there was no luck in the matter, but it was all a problem in arithmetic, or an experiment in chemistry.—Emerson.

The simplest way is to have two cloths and a basin of hot water ready to wring out and replace the one that becomes cool on the head.

Women Spoil Watches.

It is a notorious fact that watches owned by women are less accurate than those carried by men. The cause for this can be directly assigned to the irregularity with which women wind their watches and the frequency with which they allow them to run down.

He Wanted to Know.

The late E. H. Harriman, says the Wall Street Journal, was a stickler for facts. He cared little for an approximate statement. When he asked his employees for information he wanted it definite.

While traveling through Nevada one day with a number of the officials of the Union Pacific the train passed a little station with much platform, a bleak background of sagebrush and junipers and no habitation within sight.

"What is that station there for?" asked Mr. Harriman of one of the railway officials with the party.

"They ship a few cattle and two or three cars of wool."

"Which is it, two or three?" snapped Mr. Harriman. "Which is it? There is a difference of 33 1-3 per cent."

OUR DAILY PATTERN.

1599.—A Practical, Serviceable Gown For Maternity or Invalid Wear.
This desirable model has new style features and is most practical in its make-up. The fronts are full under a square yoke, and open over a neat vest. An return on the vest allows for widening at the fronts and the fullness is comfortable and pleasing. The sleeves are in wrist length and dart fitted. A stylish collar finishes the neck edge. The skirt portion, the important part of this model, is made with gathered fullness over the hips, deep plaited panel portions in back and front, where it is finished with a tucked stitched return that may also afford added width if required. The model is so arranged that the fullness at the waistline is adjustable to any required waist size, without alteration on the garment, and allowance is also made for lengthening the front. The pattern is cut in 6 sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust measure. It requires 6 yards of 44 inch material for a 36 inch size. The skirt measures about 3 1/4 yards at its lower edge.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10 cents in silver or stamps by the Pattern Department, The Freeman, Rondout, N. Y. Be sure to state the size wanted.

An ideal summer frock is shown in fine white silk net, the skirt of which consists of layer upon layer of this filmy material the bottom of each finished with deep points. The bodice is extremely simple featuring a square neck which is effected by the arrangement of the folds of net. The crushed satin girdle and corsage of flowers are dainty details.

Very Much Misunderstood.
"I was presented at a ball," said Jones, "to a young lady whose proportions were anything but meager. After the accustomed manner, I asked her to honor me with a dance. She replied with a desolate air: 'I am only free for the cotton and I cannot pledge myself for that, because I am not certain whether my people will be leaving before it comes off.' Jones thought he would seize the chance of a compliment and said: 'Oh, how empty the room will seem when you have left it.' You should have seen the savage look that she gave poor Jones."

ROAD CONDITION TIPS FOR TOURISTS

West Point to Newburgh—All motorists are advised to avoid: West Point to Newburgh over Storm King Mountain. This is practically impassable, and extremely dangerous. Road-bed washed out and many bad water-bars.

West Point to Central Valley—Very bad and practically impassable. This means that there is no suitable connection between West Point and Newburgh on the west shore without going many miles out of the way (down the river and thence up via Tuxedo). For the present, at least, the only thing to do is to take the ferry to Garrison, follow the east side to Beacon, there recrossing the river to Newburgh.

Binghamton to Oneonta—State road via Windsor, Harpersville, Unadilla, Otisco, Oneonta. From Binghamton to Harpersville via Sanatoga Springs, short detour from the Springs to Belden.

Binghamton to Norwich—Improved highway via Port Crane to North Penton, thence to Chenango Forks, detour over earth highway to Greene. Earth highway from Greene almost to Oxford and macadam from Oxford to Norwich.

Utica to Norwich—Improved highway via Clinton, Deansboro, Oriskany Falls, Madison to Bouckville with exception of short piece at Oriskany Falls. From Bouckville macadam to Hamilton with construction between Hamilton-Earlville-Sherburne. From Sherburne to Norwich is improved state highway.

Oneonta to Albany—Improved highway via Schenectady, Worcester, Cobleskill, West Berne and Berne into Albany.

Oneonta to Kingston—All state road via Davenport, Stamford, Grand Gorge, Margaretville, Phenicia, Kingston.

Binghamton to Liberty—Macadam via Windsor, Hancock to East Branch. Detour East Branch to Roscoe and macadam from Roscoe via Livingston Manor to Liberty.

Oneonta to Cooperstown—Macadam via Colliersville, Milford to Cooperstown.

Utica to Cooperstown—Macadam via Frankfort, Ilion Gorge to Cedarville. Earth highway from Cedarville through Richfield Springs picking up macadam for several miles and thence to Springfield. From Springfield to Five-Mile Point to be constructed this summer. Macadam Five-Mile Point to Cooperstown.

Binghamton to Elmira—Macadam but short detour from Binghamton to Vestal.

Syracuse to Utica—All macadam road via Chittenango, Oneida and Ticonderoga.

Syracuse to Oswego—Improved highway via Phoenix and Fulton, along the east side of the river to Oswego. Improved highway from Fulton along the west side of the river to Oswego.

Syracuse to Rochester—Improved highway via Auburn, Seneca Falls, Geneva, Clifton Springs, Victor to Rochester.

Auburn to Ithaca—State road via Meravia and Freeville to Ithaca.

Ithaca to Syracuse—Improved highway via Dryden, Cortland and Tully. From Tully to Syracuse via Onondaga or Indian Reservation very good, and all improved but about six miles.

Ithaca to Watkins Glen—All state road but one mile, via Alpine and Montour Falls.

Rochester to Watkins Glen—Improved highway via Clifton Springs, Geneva, Penn Yan, Dundee with the last four miles earth highway to Watkins. Avoid taking the lake route from Dundee to Watkins.

Rochester to Oswego—Road macadam to Sodus, poor to Wolcott and thence macadam and good to Oswego. Choice route, but longer via Clifton Springs to Lyons, dirt to Clyde and macadam to North Rose, Wolcott to Oswego.

Utica to Watertown—Good macadam via Trenton, Boonville, Copenhagen to Watertown.

Buffalo to Boston (Mass.)—Improved highway via Batavia, Syracuse, Utica, Albany, Pittsfield, Springfield, Worcester to Boston total distance 472 miles of continuous improved highway.

Buffalo to Rouses Point, 450 miles, and practically all improved with exception of 13 miles from Sodus to Wolcott, route passing through Oswego, Watertown and Malone.

Not a Question of Etiquette. Mrs. Hendricks (the landlady)—Can I help you to some more soup, Mr. Dumley?

Mr. Dumley—No, thanks. Mrs. Hendricks (engagingly)—Don't refuse, Mr. Dumley, because it isn't considered good form to be helped twice to soup. We're not particular people here.

Mr. Dumley—Oh, etiquette has nothing to do with it, madam; it's the soup.

He Explains. "What did you call your silver mine?"

"The American Boy."

"Any particular reason for calling it by that name?"

"Well, it had plenty of pockets, but nothing in them except rubbish."—Kansas City Journal.

By Degrees. "My dear, isn't that dress a trifle extreme?"

"Extreme? Why, I put this on in order that you may become accustomed to the one I am having made."—Judge.

Their Kind. "I understand this locality is considered a very aristocratic one."

"It certainly is. Even the bills out here have crests."—Baltimore American.

He Wasn't First. She (just kissed by him)—How dare you? Papa said he would kill the first man who kissed me. He—How interesting. And did he?

MANY SOUTHPAWS IN AMERICAN LEAGUE

The left-handed hitter who settles down in the batting box and takes a "too hold" against right-handed pitching, but who fails to hit left-handed tossing with equal ability, is going to have a tough time of it this season in the American league. Never have southpaws been more plentiful. Plank, Hamilton, Wellman, and Koob are with St. Louis. Russell, Danforth, and Williams are with the White Sox; Leonard, Ruth, Collins, and Gregg are among the port-side fighters with the Boston Red Sox; Coveleski and Oldham are at Detroit; Harper and Boehling represent Washington; Counbe will be met at Cleveland. Philadelphia has Bressler, and Morridge and Cullip are only two of the several left-handers at present owned by the Yanks.

KAUFF BETTER BALL PLAYER

Manager Jennings of Tigers Voices Interesting Opinion of Giants' New Outfielder.

Hugh Jennings has voiced an interesting opinion concerning Benny Kauff. It is that Benny will be a better ball player in the National league than he was in the Federal. Jennings bases his opinion this way: "Kauff will be a better ball player under McGraw than he was in the Federal because he will be more subject to discipline. No ball player can do himself justice unless he is accountable to a manager he respects."

PETE HARRISON IS INITIATED

Newly Appointed Umpire Receives Characteristic Scorching at Hands of John McGraw.

Pete Harrison, the new National league umpire has received his initiation at the hands of John J. McGraw. Sooner or later they all have to get a McGraw baptism and it may as well be now as any time. Harrison gave a decision on the bases which entitled the Giants' leader to a protest, but "the ump" believes that he gave the play right.

Walking over to the referee, McGraw said, "Well, old boy, you've tipped your hand, your a homer." "Go away, I won't talk to you," replied Harrison. "Yes, you will talk to me," continued McGraw as he followed Harrison. "I have been talking to umpires twenty-five years and I'm going to talk to you." Other remarks were made—anyway Harrison now knows McGraw.

GUM-CHEWING NOT POPULAR

American League Umpires Do Not Engage in Mastication Exercises While on Field.

There are no gum-chewing umpires in the American league; at least if they do indulge in mastication exercises on the field the movement of the jaws is too slight to be detected. Last year several National league arbiters outdid all the cows in Christendom by the continuousness and emphasis of their cud-chewing; but maybe this season they have reformed.

Water at Gibraltar. There is so little water on the rock of Gibraltar that the supply is increased by condensing dew.

Not Settled. Jones—Does he love her still? Johnson—No; her father keeps him on the jump all the time.

NOTES of the DIAMOND

Fielder Jones says that his team is going to improve.

Witt of the Mackmen is fast becoming a great shortstop.

Jim Thorpe has been doing some tremendous hitting for Milwaukee.

Jake Daubert, the Dodgers' first sacker, is playing a whale of a game.

Cozy Dolan is one of the few who can emulate Ty Cobb and get away with it.

The real surprise of the Western league, one might say, has been Wichita.

"Don't let anybody tell you that Alexander has gone back," said Jake Daubert.

Ruth of the Red Sox is as good a pitcher as there is in the American league to date.

Connie Mack declares Elmer Myers the greatest pitcher he has developed in sixteen years.

The Cincinnati Reds are showing a lot more spirit in their work this year than ever before.

Roger Bresnahan once traded Pitcher Hopper for a bird dog. He is now ready to trade back.

George Stallings says the only club the Braves have to dispose of to win the pennant is Chicago.

There were more homers made off of "Rube" Marquard last season than off of any other pitcher.

Milwaukee "fans" are enthusiastic over the splendid playing of "Jim" Thorpe, formerly of the Giants.

Bill Louden, last year with the Buffalo Feds, is the talk of Cincinnati, where he is playing second base.

Connie Mack has signed Captain Bob Watt of the Columbia university. He is an infidel and a hard hitter.

Some players seem to get a lot of pleasure out of their troubles when they are telling them to the umpire. Walter Rehg, onetime Pirate and Red Sox infidel, is playing a slashing game for "Dave" Shean's Providence Grays.

Elmer Smith, the youngster playing right field for the Indians, is about as timely a hitter as there is in the big leagues.

Rabbit Maranville covers so much ground the Boston baseball experts refer to him as being hit to his Pacific or Atlantic side.

One of "Benny" Kauff's good traits is good sportsmanship. When the umpire calls a third strike "Benny" usually turns to the bench without a show of protest.

Fielder Jones is still wearing a uniform and conching from the lines. The veteran pilot also puts in about ten minutes pitching to his batters in preliminary practice.

Pick a Good One. If you are determined to live and die a slave to custom, see that it is at least a good one.

Some of our readers will remember Rev. and Mrs. Clarke keeping a seminary on the site where the new residence of Mrs. George Clarke and Misses Sarah and Anna Clarke now are. The building was burned down years ago—about fifty years ago. Rev. and Mrs. Clarke kept the boarding school. The venerable retired pastor and teacher is still in excellent health, considering his age, and is still active.

Among Decoration Day and other recent visitors are Miss May Lee Brice of New York city, at the home of Mrs. and Miss de Leon; Mr. Longgreen of Copenhagen, Denmark, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Christensen; Miss Helen Hamm of Jersey City at the home of her mother, Mrs. Catherine Hamm; Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Greenlaw of New York city and Mr. and Mrs. George Richards of Chatham, N. J. A. Driscoll fell from his spray wagon last week and received quite a shaking up. We are glad to say he did not receive any serious injuries.

E. H. Converse of Burlington, Vt., is a guest at the homes of George and R. W. Hallock. Mr. Converse has been spending five months in Washington, D. C., for the benefit of his health.

On the afternoon of June 10 a "rose tea" will be given on the lawn of H. J. Pratt at Highland, under the auspices of the P. E. O. Sisterhood. A program will be rendered. Tea and wafers will be served for which a silver offering is asked. As this is a benefit for Raymond Perkins and his work as a medical missionary in Java, it is hoped that everyone will contribute to this good cause as Dr. Perkins is well known in these parts, having been born and brought up near Milton.

Invitations have been received in Milton for the marriage of Nola B. Guthrie, daughter of Mrs. Hiram Fredenburgh, to Lieutenant Maurice L. Miller, to take place on Thursday, June 15, at Monroe, N. Y. Miss Guthrie will be remembered by many as she was a teacher at District No. 2.

OUR DAILY PATTERN.

1599.—A Practical, Serviceable Gown

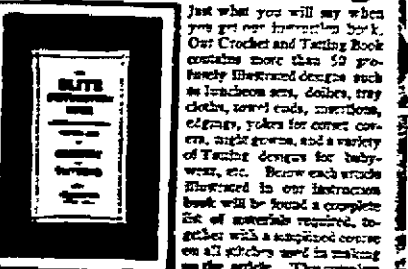

For Maternity or Invalid Wear.

This desirable model has new style features and is most practical in its make-up. The fronts are full under a square yoke, and open over a neat vest. An insert on the vest allows for widening at the fronts and the fullness is comfortable and pleasing. The sleeves are in wrist length and dart fitted. A stylish collar finishes the neck edge. The skirt portion, the important part of this model, is made with gathered fullness over the hips, deep pleated panel portions in back and front, where it is finished with a tucked stiched return that may also afford added width if required. The model is so arranged that the fullness at the waistline is adjustable to any required waist size, without alteration on the garment, and allowance is also made for lengthening the front. The pattern is cut in 6 sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust measure. It requires 6 yards of 44 inch material for a 36 inch size. The skirt measures about 3 1/4 yards at its lower edge.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10 cents in silver or stamps by the Pattern Department, The Freeman, Roundout, N. Y. Be sure to state the size wanted.

(By La Raconteuse.)
An ideal summer frock is shown in fine white silk net, the skirt of which consists of layer upon layer of this filmy material, the bottom of each finished with deep points. The bodice is extremely simple featuring a square neck which is effected by the arrangement of the folds of net. The crushed satin girdle and corsage of flowers are dainty details.

Secret of Harmony.

Pull together. This is the real secret of harmony. There is a story told of a man who had committed the care of one of his teams to a faithful servant for years. At last one of the horses sickened and died. While the servant was burying the faithful animal, the other horse came across the field and stood by, watching the work as a silent mourner. The master said: "I believe Dick loved Billy." Instantly the servant replied: "In case he did massa, why, they pulled together nigh 20 years."—Christian Herald.

Mexican Names.
Mexican names that are euphonious in Spanish are awkward when pronounced as in English. The vowels have the same sound as in German. J has the sound of a strongly aspirated H, and the H is mute. The double R is rolled, and the double L is followed by the consonant sound of Y. The accent is on the ultimate when the word ends in a consonant, usually on the penultimate when ending in a vowel. Exceptions are indicated by use of the accent mark.

The following members of Trinity Episcopal Sunday school will graduate on Sunday with appropriate exercises: Stella Lowther, Bertha Van Wert, Hazel Perks, Marie Hoinbeck, Helen Ackerman, Margaret Ohley, Ethel Liebert, Alice Styles, Beatrice Whittaker, Elsie Johnson, Mary Hazen, Hazel Snyder, Fred Leibel, William Young, Joseph Moyer, Kenneth Ohley and Leslie Vae Mullen.

Mrs. Hannah Washburn is a guest of her parents on Washington avenue. Mrs. Hannah Washburn is a guest of Mrs. John Washburn on John street.

Overbach of Market street are in New York city attending the wedding of Hoyt Overbach and Miss Clarissa Pilgrim, which takes place this evening at 6 o'clock.

Very Much Misunderstood.
"I was presented at a ball," said Jones, "to a young lady whose proportions were anything but meager. After the accustomed manner, I asked her to honor me with a dance. She replied with a desolate air: 'I am only free for the cotillon and I cannot pledge myself for that, because I am not certain whether my people will be leaving before it comes off.' Jones thought he would seize the chance of a compliment and said: 'Oh, how empty the room will seem when you have left it.' You should have seen the savage look that she gave poor Jones."

STOLEN CAR FOUND IN KEMBLE CAMP

Dr. Urban T. Kemble Held for Grand Jury on Charge of Stealing an Automobile He Had Sold to Olivera Man.

Following the recovery of the seven passenger Hupmobile which was stolen from the barn of J. E. Bomsta at Olivera, early Tuesday morning, Dr. Urban T. Kemble of this city, son of Dr. William Kemble, was arrested on a charge of grand larceny and before Justice of the Peace Theodore Voss at Phoenix Friday afternoon he was held to await the action of the grand jury on that charge and furnished bail in the sum of $1,000 with Charles Hubscher of Lake Katrine as surety.

Bomsta has conducted a large boarding house at Olivera for some time. He married Mrs. Hilda, whose husband formerly conducted a hotel on the Saugerties road, who assists him in conducting the Olivera boarding house. The Hupmobile was purchased some time ago from Dr. Kemble, who is agent for that car in this vicinity, and after Bomsta had purchased and paid for the car he insured it against theft.

The car was taken from the barn connected with the boarding house property at an early hour Tuesday morning and was brought to Kingston and later was driven to the Kemble fishing camp in the town of Denning, where it was recovered on Friday by Sheriff Shultis. Under Sheriff Hornbeck and Jailer Jocelyn, who had been engaged on the case since the theft of the car was reported to them by Bomsta on Tuesday, Bomsta also had reported the theft of his machine to the insurance company.

While near Lackawack at an early hour Friday morning, the sheriff's party met Kemble, who was returning to Kingston in an automobile. The Bomsta car was found at the Kemble camp.

ELLENVILLE.

Ellenville, June 10.—The spelling contest for the township held at the high school, Ellenville, Friday afternoon, under the supervision of District Superintendent John M. Schoonmaker of Accord, N. Y., resulted as follows: There were thirty-five contestants and after the contest there were five eligible to be admitted to the county contest at the Ulster County Fair to be held in Ellenville in August. The winners at county fair to enter the state contest at fair at Syracuse. The five are Luella Stangle of Lackawack, who stood last at the township contest; Augusta Johnson and Alice Bennett, Ulster Heights; Sarah Taylor and Stewart Groo, Ellenville. The contestants were from fifth grade to high school.

Mrs. William D. Cunningham entertained thirty-five friends in honor of Miss Sadie Kinard at a miscellaneous shower at her home on Maple avenue Thursday evening. The decorations of the home were pink and white carnations and the favors were the same. The game of hearts was played and the prize, a set of gold pins, went to Mrs. Ralph Eaton, who won at the games. The gifts to the young lady, who has won many friends during her stay in Ellenville, were very handsome, including several pieces of cut glass and silver. The hostess served very delicious refreshments which were coupled with a pleasant social hour. Miss Kinard's marriage is to be consummated in the near future.

Children's Day will be observed at the Methodist Episcopal Church on Sunday. At the morning service the pastor will baptize infants that are presented and deliver a sermon appropriate for the occasion. The service in the evening will be given by the members of the Sunday school, under the direction of the superintendent, Guy L. Gould. The program entitled, "The Glad Golden Days," will be used. The Sunday school will be assisted in their singing by the church choir under the direction of Organist Frank J. Campbell.

Mrs. E. E. Count has been in New York this week to consult with Bishop Nielsen of the Methodist Episcopal Church, who is to go to Bulgaria at an early date.

Mrs. Denman of Maple avenue is on a visit with her daughter, Miss Minerva Denman, in New York.

George B. Holmes of the brick block store has been in New York on business this week.

TRAVELERS VISIT AT WEST POINT

The United States Military Academy at West Point was the mecca on Friday afternoon for some 700 delegates and visitors to the Grand Council convention who made a most enjoyable trip on the Mary Powell, leaving the dock on Ferry street shortly after 2 o'clock. The ride down the Hudson was a novelty to many of the passengers and the beauties of the Highlands were the cause of many enthusiastic tributes to the attractions offered by Kingston as a convention city.

At West Point the party debarked and witnessed the dress parade of the cadets, the ceremonies incident to the firing of the sunset gun and the countless objects of interest in the museum and at other places in the vicinity of this historic spot. All of the travelers were more than pleased with this excursion, patriotism being one of the tenets of the order.

Entertainment on board the steamer included dancing, music and singing. A distinct hit was made by the presence of T. R., impersonated by Edward A. Spiegel of Freeport, L. I., one of the delegation whose members sport the huge oyster shell badges. Made up with Rough Rider hat and with spectacles and teeth true to the model, Mr. Spiegel was a great source of merriment. He came to the boat late, insisted on leading the band and made himself as important and swelled up as possible, quite as though it was Chicago and T. R. on deck instead of on the long distance phone.

Mr. Spiegel excelled Roosevelt in one thing, he can sing. He gave a number of hyphenated dialect ditties, including his own composition, "Der Wash on die Line."

The boat trip was a highly enjoyable feature and popular with every visitor.

CONVENTION SIDE LIGHTS

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
Chicago, June 10.—Of all the flowery oratory spilled at the session of the Progressives, Edward R. Gurney of Florida exuded the most. "In the ancient days," he stated, after having made several flights. "Oh, go back to the flood, yelled a voice from the gallery and the laugh that followed put an end to the Florida delegate's session."

It was anything to kill time in the Moose convention. Rules of all sorts and of little meaning were promulgated in order that the time for nominating could be put off. The proceedings grew mighty monotonous. Finally this bulletin was passed around the press tables:

"George W. Perkins moved to take the North Pole into the party. It would help to keep the delegates cool and prevent the nomination of Teddy at this time."

When the roll was being called on the motion to take the Prohibition plank the Hawaiian delegation—consisting of George R. Carter—arose and said:

"The delegation from Hawaii is unanimous for prohibition but the delegation is also unanimous for tabling the plank."

F. M. Etheridge of Texas caused a sensation when he declared:

"If the convention puts a Prohibition plank in the platform it might as well descend from its great leader to W. J. Bryan." The near sensation resulted from the fact that Mr. Bryan himself was believed to be in the hall. It was learned, however, that he had departed a short time before.

F. J. Hendershot of Ogden, Utah, has labored manfully to get his name into the papers—so here goes: At least a dozen times daily he arises and "flutes" a few popular airs such as "Yankee Doodle," "Dixie" and others of a similar character. He always carries his flute with him so that he can start something at any time.

The new spell-binders burst forth into bloom during the oratorical field exercises. Merle D. Vincent of Colorado was the first. He made a stirring, straight-out Progressive campaign speech that brought the delegates to their feet yelling madly. The other was Dorcy Carroll, who hails from Minot, N. D. Here's the one he pulled that started him on his way to fame:

"I met a friend of mine who happened to be a Republican. He said, 'I hear you're chairman of your delegation.' I told him that I had that honor. Well, says he, 'can you control your delegation?' I cannot, I told him. I have trouble enough controlling myself."

The cheers that followed this were so strong that Carroll had to go to the stage and make a real address.

Nearly Threw Away Small Fortune.

Finding an old package in the cellar of her home at 216 Broadway, Newburgh, on Thursday, Mrs. Adam Kane was about to throw it into the stove, when it occurred to her to examine it. She did so and found it contained more than $200 in cash, several negotiable checks and two bank books on Newburgh banks, the whole value in the parcel aggregating $2,700.

Auto Breaks Man's Leg.

An Italian berry picker had his leg broken on Thursday as a result of being run into by the automobile of George Pratt of Highland. The accident happened at Atkins's corner. The rain had made the road slippery and the auto skidded and hit the berry picker. He was taken to the Vassar Hospital at Poughkeepsie.

PROGRESSIVES HELD BACK BY PERKINS

Leader Urges Further Delay Pending Peace Negotiations with Republicans—Insurgent Progressives Call on Johnson to Lead.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
Auditorium, Chicago, June 10.—George W. Perkins, chairman of the executive committee of the Progressive party, held a long conference with the state chairmen of the Moose today and urged them to defer definite action in the convention pending the results of further peace negotiations with leaders of the Republican party.

From Mr. Perkins's attitude, it was evident that the Progressive leaders were anxious to take no step that would cause the G. O. P. to decide immediately upon a candidate. It developed at the conference that a movement which had been inaugurated to eliminate Theodore Roosevelt because the former president had not given the word to proceed, would have no success.

The insurgent Progressives wanted Governor Hiram Johnson of California to become their standard bearer, but the governor squelched this scheme by declaring that he would not accept the nomination.

"Under no circumstances could I take the nomination," said Governor Johnson. "We are going to nominate Col. Roosevelt this morning, I hope."

"I regret very much that in some quarters my speech of last night was misinterpreted so as to make it appear that I, by inference, charged Col. Roosevelt with prospective desertion of the Progressive party. Nothing was farther from my intention."

Governor Johnson was then called into a conference of the leaders. The leaders were standing in an excited group while various members addressed them. Dean Lewis presided over the meeting. Several of the state chairmen insisted upon an immediate nomination.

During the course of the meeting, Mr. Perkins and the members of the conference committee left for the Chicago Club to attend the conference sessions. He declined angrily to reply to the question as to whether or not Col. Roosevelt would decline the Moose nomination.

"You ought to know better than to ask me such a question," he said to his listeners.

The meeting of the state chairmen adjourned as the members of the conference committee started for the Chicago Club, but the chairmen remained at Perkins's headquarters to await the result of the peace committee's work.

While the chairmen awaited word from Perkins on the peace negotiation, they got into a row among themselves, many criticizing their leaders for trying to hold them back. The near sensation was caused by Davis Miller, chairman of the Florida delegation, and a strong Perkins man, bolted the meeting.

He said he would not tolerate the attacks made on Perkins.

SUBMARINE SINKS ITALIAN TRANSPORT

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
Rome, June 10.—An Italian transport with 1,000 troops on board, has been sunk in the Adriatic Sea by an Austrian submarine.

The transport was the Principe Umberto. The loss of life was very heavy.

The admiralty announced the destruction of the transport in the following official statement:

"The Principe Umberto while conveying troops and war materials and while escorted by destroyers was attacked in the lower Adriatic by two Austrian submarines. She was struck by a torpedo and sunk in a few moments. Although prompt aid was rendered it is feared that half of the troops on board perished."

Leave the Decorations.

Officers of the Chamber of Commerce today expressed the hope that citizens and merchants who had decorated for the Commercial Travelers' convention would leave the decorations until next week as the convention of the Sons and Daughters of Liberty will convene at Knights of Pythias Hall, Wall and John John streets, on that day for a three days' session. About 300 delegates will be in attendance. As there is no local lodge of the order in Kingston all citizens are urged to extend courtesies to the visiting delegations.

Strangled to Death by Hook.

Clifford, two year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Wisner E. Masker of Amity, while playing about the house got hold of a hook which was used to fasten into a wall to hang up various articles and in some manner swallowed it. He died later at the Thrall Hospital at Middletown, where he was taken, from strangulation.

LEADERS REJECT ROOSEVELT OFFER

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
Coliseum, June 10.—The suggestion of Col. Roosevelt that Senator Lodge be put forward as a compromise candidate for the presidency was rejected by the Republican leaders here today.

Senators Smoot, Crane, Borah, Nicholas Murray Butler of New York and National Chairman Hillis considered the matter. Senator Borah afterward said: "Col. Roosevelt suggested Senator Lodge as a compromise candidate. After discussing the suggestion we agreed to notify Col. Roosevelt that conditions here made it impossible to nominate Senator Lodge."

Said Vail Had Two Wives.

A summons and complaint in an action for divorce was filed on Friday in Poughkeepsie by Ella J. Vail against her husband Austin D. Vail. Mrs. Vail is a resident of Utica, but the complaint charges Vail with having deserted her in 1911 and having married Mae Borah, a resident of Poughkeepsie, who was married to Utica at the time. It is stated that Miss Borah did not know Vail was married. Before going to Poughkeepsie to live, the complaint says, they resided for a time at Highland. In 1914 Vail is charged with abandoning his last wife and going to New Jersey to live. His present whereabouts are unknown.

The Poughkeepsie attorneys represented Mr. Dupuy in the proceedings, which Judge Jenkins dismissed.

Cloudy Weather Keeps It Quiet.

The disagreeable weather of the past day or so may have had something to do with keeping the police blotter clean for no cases were brought to the attention of Recorder Lang this morning by the police.

Joanna and the Family Fate

How the Youngest Baxter Girl Found Her Mission

By ANNE O'HAGAN.
Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

It was the chief article of the Baxter family faith that frivolity ill becomes a woman. All the sisters of the Rev. Elijah Baxter had been serious minded—pioneer woman physicians, woman colleagues, woman suffragists, and the like. His wife, having no sisters, had concentrated the earnestness of a whole family in herself and had married the Rev. Elijah, than which no more conclusive evidence of seriousness could be imagined.

The Baxter girls up to Joanna had continued the family tradition fittingly. Cornelia had gone to Japan to convert the inhabitants of that island kingdom to her father's creed and had there married a brother missionary. Eliza taught mathematics in a western coeducational college, Sarah was the traveling delegate for the Society for the Suppression of Smokers, and Sophia had proved her entire spiritual kinship with the Baxters by marrying a widowed country doctor with seven small children.

When Joanna was born, twelve years after the youngest of her sisters, a baby had been too great a novelty in the paragon to escape undue petting. This fact was held later to account for much that worried and disheartened the Baxters.

When Joanna came home from college—she had steadfastly, even rebelliously, refused to attend the institution of learning in which Eliza taught mathematics—her parents looked at her with foreboding and at each other with dismay. From her smart stock to her smart shoe laces she seemed to them to radiate worldliness. They took prompt counsel together concerning her reformation. They divided the labor, having a premonition of its immensity.

"After you have talked with her seriously about her future," said Mrs. Baxter, "I will speak to her of her dress. Apparently it has been a great mistake to let her spend the last two vacations away from home and to let her buy her own clothes, but I did it for the best. How shall a young woman learn thrift and self reliance except by such methods?"

"Bring her to me," rumbled Joanna's father.

Joanna floated into the study, all pink boucances and point d'esprit fichus. "Isn't this a duck of a negligee, mother dear?" she demanded. "And I've bought you one as pretty, all lavender lawn and white mull. And you've got to do your hair quite differently. I'll show you how."

"Joanna, your father wishes to talk seriously to you."

"I wish you'd call me Jo. All the girls do," remarked the young woman, curling a blown strand of her hair about a lead pencil from her father's desk.

The Rev. Elijah said a few words on the essential vulgarity of nicknames;

"JOANNA, WHAT CAREER, IF ANY, ATTRACTS YOU?"

then he came to the point of his discourse.

"Joanna, what career, if any, attracts you?"

"You are somewhat out of your road," he answered as formally. "But I shall be very glad to take you to the point where you took the wrong turn."

"The wrong turn?" mused Joanna.

"The right turn," declared the young man firmly.

They looked at each other and laughed.

"I don't want to interfere with your luncheon," Joanna began again politely.

"If I could persuade you to share it," begged the young man deferentially.

"I fear you will be too late for a decent meal at the Cascade House."

Joanna hesitated. She thought of the Rev. Elijah and her mother, of her array of excellent relatives and of the ordinary conventions of ordinary life.

Then she looked about her, and she knew that this was not the world as she had known it. She deliberately brushed aside all other considerations.

"If you only would give me a bite!" she said. "I'm starving!"

"Perhaps," he remarked tentatively as Joanna devoured trout with hot butter and coffee, "perhaps I had better introduce myself."

"Please, don't," she begged or commanded. "I wish to pretend that things are all as I want them to be, and I can't if I have to know a lot of stupid facts. No. This is my own desert island—mountain then. I am a sort of Robinson Crusoe person, and you're just Friday!"

"Your man Friday?"

Joanna had the grace to blush at

"There, there, we'll talk of that later."

When he had finally elicited the information that her "life work" was a subject to which Joanna had given no thought he sighed.

"I fear you do not take existence seriously enough, Joanna. You are twenty-two. You should have formulated some notion of what you wish to do to leave the world a better place than you found it."

"Oh, I dare say I'll get married some day," said Joanna casually. "Are there any amusing men in town?"

"Amusing?" gasped Mrs. Baxter.

"Amusing?" thundered Mr. Baxter.

Having thus precipitated the catastrophe, Joanna learned in three minutes that she was designed, in default of any nobler choice on her own part, as a helpmeet for the Rev. Lemuel Towers of Lacknow, India.

"He is at home on the first visit in eight years," said her father. "He is his estimable first wife is no more. In the mission field a man needs a wife. He has been—er—impressed with your pictures and—er—what we have told him of your true character. He once met your sister Cornelia. He wishes an opportunity to win your regard."

Joanna had recovered her breath.

"Stop!" she commanded imperiously.

"It is horrible! How can you want to send me away from you, away from my home? And I won't marry him. I won't marry any minister! I won't! I hate them all—all but you, father!"

She began to sob tearfully.

Three days later, having contemptuously refused to make her appearance whenever the Rev. Lemuel Towers came to the paragon, she was shipped to Eliza in the Rocky mountains. Eliza had always had influence with her, her parents recalled thankfully.

"What is that man driver?" Joanna demanded of the stage driver in whose taciturn company she was finishing the journey to Eliza.

She indicated a stalwart figure standing astride of two rocks in the clear, rushing stream beside which the road twisted through the mountains.

"Fishin'. Can't you see's much as that?"

"Oh, of course," murmured Joanna, abashed. "I see the rod now."

At that second the fisherman wound his reel swiftly, and then flashed in the afternoon sunlight a glittering something at the end of the slender line.

"Good catch!" roared the stage driver above the rumble of his wheels and the foaming of the water. The fisherman looked up to wave an acknowledgment of the compliment; but, seeing Joanna, her slim body bent forward, her young face smiling and interested, he pulled his battered cap off his head and stared until the wagon disappeared at the next bend.

"Who is he?" asked Joanna.

"Dunno. Campin' a mile or two up here. Brought up his own things, so I didn't have no chance to get acquainted with him. Here we are."

He looked up at the sound of her approach and sprang to his feet, to come hastily and happily toward her.

"You said yesterday that you would not come out with me today," he cried, "or I should have been lurking about in the woods."

"I know. But I've come."

She spoke heavily and paused. Then she hurried on quickly.

"I've just come to my senses," she said. "I've been crazy—this last month—crazy with freedom and obstinacy."

"You've been the most!"

"No, no. Don't stop me. I want to say it all and go away. I've acted the way I have, I've flunked with you, fished with you, tramped with you, a stranger, out of bravado and—"

"Was it nothing but bravado?" asked the man Friday, very pale himself now.

"Oh, yes! The sweetness of it, the beauty of it—I can't say what I mean. It was like dewy mornings. Oh, I've liked it, I've liked it very much and it never seemed to me for a minute horrid and common and vulgar."

"Must think of it, of me?"

"Have I done anything to make you believe that I thought anything unworthy of?" he hesitated and looked at her, then looked around him—"of this?"

"What I think of you now I shall think of you always. And that is this—oh, child, don't you know? That you are the one woman for me—the one woman? If you reproach yourself for our meetings I am to blame. I should have told you who I was, should have gone to that gossiping old hostility of yours and met you with all the rigors, no, hang it, I should not have done anything of the sort! Why should I have spoiled an idyl? I didn't want to know who I was at first. It makes an immediate difference in people's attitudes to learn that one is a clergyman. I wanted to be just a fellow human for awhile—just a man. What is the matter, child, my dear?"

For Joanna, after one wild look at him, had burst into a hysterical laugh. It ended in a sob, smothered on his shoulder.

"Yes"—the Rev. Elijah spoke to a congratulatory caller with a certain pompous placidity—"yes, Joanna is to leave us. Of course you have heard of Dr. Graham's work in New York? They tell me that his city missionary program is the finest one there. He is young to be rector of so important a church as St. Jude's on the avenue. Of course—and the Rev. Elijah sighed—"we could have wished that he was of our own denomination, but the affections cannot be coerced, and his wife will be a very earnest one. None of our children, we are humbly proud to say, has failed to find a useful, serious mission in the world."

"Your man Friday?"

Joanna had the grace to blush at

When he had finally elicited the information that her "life work" was a subject to which Joanna had given no thought he sighed.

"I fear you do not take existence seriously enough, Joanna. You are twenty-two. You should have formulated some notion of what you wish to do to leave the world a better place than you found it."

AND NO WATER WAS SPILLED.

Variety on Parade Program at Broadway and Downs Street.

What one traveling man said was the only variation from the water that has been spilled regularly on their three days' session occurred this morning a few moments before the parade reached Broadway and Downs street. There the inevitable small boy had been on hand with an express wagon which contained a twenty quart can of milk. He negotiated the corner in accordance with traffic rules but failed on the curb, the wagon going over and the milk spilling like a miniature Niagara into the sewer. The lad mingled his tears with the lactical fluid and was so startled that he could not even right the can. This was done for him by an obliging copper and with about six quarts remaining of his original cargo the boy went on his way though not rejoicing.

ROAD CONDITION TIPS FOR TOURISTS

West Point to Newburgh—All motorists are advised to avoid: West Point to Newburgh over Storm King Mountain. This is practically impassable, and extremely dangerous. Road-bed washed out and many bad water-bars.

West Point to Central Valley—Very bad and practically impassable. This means that there is no suitable connection between West Point and Newburgh on the west shore without going many miles out of the way (down the river and thence up via Tuxedo). For the present, at least, the only thing to do is to take the ferry to Garrison, follow the east side to Beacon, there recrossing the river to Newburgh.

Binghamton to Oneonta—State road via Windsor, Harpersville, Unadilla, Oneonta. From Binghamton to Harpersville via San Antonio Springs, short detour from the Springs to Helden.

Not a Question of Etiquette.

Mrs. Hendricks (the landlady)—Can I help you to some more soup, Mr. Dumley?

Mr. Dumley—No, thanks.

Mrs. Hendricks (eagerly)—Don't refuse, Mr. Dumley, because it isn't considered good form to be helped twice to soup. We're not particular people here.

Mr. Dumley—Oh, etiquette has nothing to do with it, madam; it's the soup.

He Explains.

"What did you call your silver mine?"

"Any particular reason for calling it by that name?"

"Extreme? Why, I put this on in order that you may become accustomed to the one I am having made."—Judge.

"It certainly is. Even the bills out here have crests."—Baltimore American.

She (just kissed by him)—How dare you? Papa said he would kill the first man who kissed me. He—How interesting. And did he?—Judge.

The left-handed hitter who settles down in the batting box and takes a "tee hold" against right-handed pitching, but who fails to hit left-handed tossing with equal ability, is going to have a tough time of it this season in the American league. Never have southpaws been more plentiful. Plank, Hamilton, Wellman, and Koob are with St. Louis. Russell, Danforth, and Williams are with the White Sox; Leonard Ruth, Collins, and Gregg are among the port-side fingers with the Boston Red Sox; Coveleskie and Oldham are at Detroit; Harper and Boehling represent Washington. Combe will be met at Cleveland; Philadelphia has Bressler, and Morgrike and Culp are only two of the several left-handers at present owned by the Yanks.

Manager Jennings of Tigers Voices Interesting Opinion of Giants' New Outfielder.

Hugh Jennings has voiced an interesting opinion concerning Benny Kauff. It is that Benny will be a better ball player in the National league than he was in the Federal. Jennings bases his opinion this way: "Kauff will be a better ball player under McGraw than he was in the Federal because he will be more subject to discipline. No ball player can do himself justice unless he is accountable to a manager he respects."

Benny Kauff.

PETE HARRISON IS INITIATED

Newly Appointed Umpire Receives Characteristic Scorching at Hands of John McGraw.

Pete Harrison, the new National league umpire has received his initiation at the hands of John J. McGraw. Sooner or later they all have to get a McGraw baptism and it may as well be now as any time. Harrison gave a decision on the bases which entitled the Giants' leader to a protest, but "the ump" believes that he gave the play right.

Walking over to the referee, McGraw said, "Well, old boy, you've tipped your hand, your number." "Go away, I won't talk to you," replied Harrison. "Yes, you will talk to me," continued McGraw as he followed Harrison. "I have been talking to umpires twenty-five years and I'm going to talk to you." Other remarks were made—anyway Harrison now knows McGraw.

GUM-CHEWING NOT POPULAR

American League Umpires Do Not Engage in Mastication Exercises While on Field.

There are no gum-chewing umpires in the American league; at least if they do indulge in mastication exercises on the field the movement of the jaws is too slight to be detected. Last year several National league arbiters outdid all the crows in Christendom by the continuousness and emphasis of their cud-chewing; but maybe this season they have reformed.

Water at Gibraltar. There is so little water on the rock of Gibraltar that the supply is increased by condensing dew.

Not Settled. Jones—Does he love her still? Johnson—No; her father keeps him on the jump all the time.

NOTES of the DIAMOND

Fielder Jones says that his team is going to improve.

Witt of the Mackmen is fast becoming a great shortstop.

Jim Thorpe has been doing some tremendous hitting for Milwaukee.

Jake Daubert, the Dodgers' first sacker, is playing a whale of a game.

Cozy Dolan is one of the few that can emulate Ty Cobb and get away with it.

The real surprise of the Western league, one might say, has been Wehlita.

"Don't let anybody tell you that Al Exum was gone back," said Jake Daubert.

Ruth of the Red Sox is as good a pitcher as there is in the American league to date.

Connie Mack declares Elmer Myers, the greatest pitcher he has developed in sixteen years.

The Cincinnati Reds are showing a lot more spirit in their work this year than ever before.

Roger Dresbach once traded Pitcher Hopper for a bird dog. He is now ready to trade back.

George Stallings says the only club the Braves have to dispose of to win the pennant is Chicago.

There were more homers made off of "Tubby" Marquard last season than off of any other pitcher.

Milwaukee "fans" are enthusiastic over the splendid playing of "Jim" Thorpe, formerly of the Giants.

Bill Louden, last year with the Buffalo Feds, is the talk of Cincinnati, where he is playing second base.

Connie Mack has signed Captain Bob Watt of the Columbia university. He is an infielder and a hard hitter.

Some players seem to get a lot of pleasure out of their troubles when they are telling them to the umpire.

Walter Rehg, one-time Pirate and Red Sox infielder, is playing a slashing game for "Dave" Shean's Providence Grays.

Elmer Smith, the youngster playing right field for the Indians, is about as timely a hitter as there is in the big leagues.

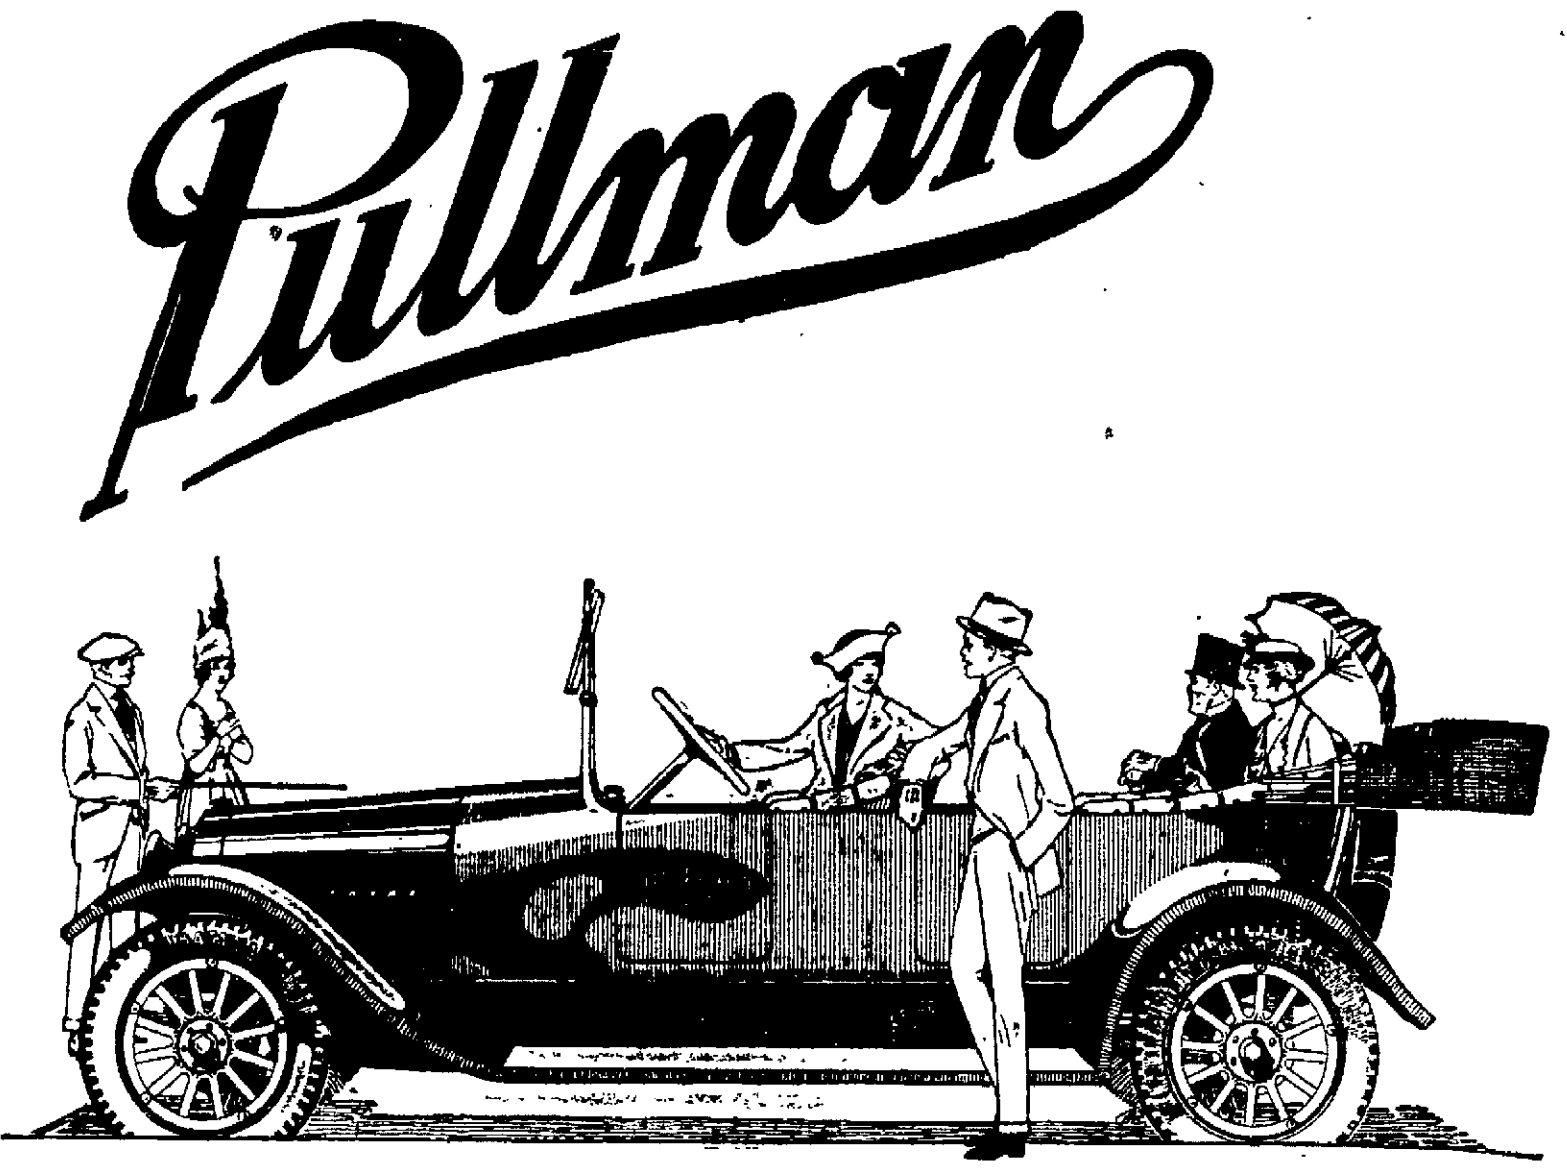

Rabbit Maranville covers so much ground the Boston baseball experts refer to him as being hit to his Pacific or Atlantic side.

One of "Benny" Kauff's good traits is good sportsmanship. When the umpire calls a third strike "Benny" usually turns to the bench without a show of protest.

Fielder Jones is still wearing a uniform and coaching from the lines. The veteran pilot also puts in about ten minutes pitching to his batters in preliminary practice.

Pick a Good One. If you are determined to live and die a slave to custom, see that it is at least a good one.

Rev. James G. Clarke, who spoke in the Presbyterian Church recently, was telling our correspondent of his uncle, the Rev. Edgar Clarke, of Fama, Ill., aged 91 years. Some of our readers will remember Rev. and Mrs. Clarke keeping a seminary on the site where the present residence of Mrs. George Clarke and Misses Sarah and Anna Clarke now are. The building was burned down years ago—about fifty years ago. Rev. and Mrs. Clarke kept the boarding school. The venerable retired pastor and teacher is still in excellent health, considering his age, and is still active.
Among Decoration Day and other recent visitors are Miss May Lee Brice of New York city, at the home of Mrs. and Miss de Leon; Mr. Loregreen of Copenhagen, Denmark, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Christensen; Miss Helen Hamm of Jersey City at the home of her mother, Mrs. Catherine Hamm; Mrs. and Mrs. Ralph Greenlaw of New York city and Mr. and Mrs. George Richards of Chatham, N. J., at their parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Hallock; Mrs. E. H. Jung, little Miss Marjorie Jung and Miss Louise Rikley of New York; William Ellis, Jr., of New York city at his grandparents, C. J. Miller; Mr. and Mrs. Absalom Brewster of Newburgh; Mr. and Mrs. William Angell of Weehawken, N. J., at their mother's, Mrs. Caroline Brewster; William McManus and H. Brenner of Brooklyn; Mrs. William Fuller of Poughkeepsie; Edward Goehring of Yonkers and Miss Elizabeth Hamm, of H. R. S. Hospital.
J. A. Driscoll fell from his spray wagon last week and received quite a shaking up. We are glad to say he did not receive any serious injuries.
E. H. Converse of Burlington, Vt., is a guest at the homes of George and R. W. Hallock. Mr. Converse has been spending five months in Washington, D. C., for the benefit of his health.
On the afternoon of June 10 a "rogo tea" will be given on the lawn of H. J. Pratt at Highland, under the auspices of the P. E. O. Sisterhood. A program will be rendered. Tea and wafers will be served for which a silver offering is asked. As this is a benefit for Raymond Perkins and his work as a medical missionary in Java, it is hoped that everyone will contribute to this good cause as Dr. Perkins is well known in these parts, having been born and brought up near Milton.
Invitations have been received in Milton for the marriage of Nola E. Guthrie, daughter of Mrs. Hiram Fredenburgh, to Lieutenant Maurice L. Miller, to take place on Thursday, June 15, at Monroe, N. Y. Miss Guthrie will be remembered by many as she was a teacher at District No. 2.
Ten members of the Epworth League attended the meeting of the Highland Local Union held in New Palis last Friday evening. They report a most profitable and enjoyable time.

Rev. H. F. Wilke is making the weekly prayer meetings for the summer interesting in the Presbyterian Church on Thursday evenings in studying the minor prophets.
Charles P. Kent & Son shipped 3 1/2 cases of strawberries on Wednesday. This fruit is ripening slowly with so much cloudy weather. We usually begin to ship quite largely on the 10th of this month.
The June graduates are busy arranging for one of the important events in their lives.

HIGH SCHOOL NEWS NOTES

Last evening the junior class of the high school entertained the graduating class with a cheerful, if not a moonlight trip to Poughkeepsie on the steamer Gardner. Had the weather conditions been more favorable there would probably have been a hundred and eighty revelers but as it was there were one hundred and ten who went. The affair would perhaps have been postponed had not the committee in charge put the question to a vote at a joint meeting of the upper classes, who decided to go in spite of the damp weather. The boat was not crowded so that the young people were able to do practically anything they pleased. The safety and well being of the students were well guarded by Miss Walton, Mr. and Mrs. Service and Miss Seigel, who were kind enough to forego their own pleasures to assure a properly conducted sail.

The boat left promptly at 7 o'clock as arranged and reached the Bridge City at nine. It was necessary to start back at ten o'clock in order to stem the tide and still reach the special trolley that was waiting at the end of the line at 12 o'clock. Although the boat waited several extra minutes for the delinquents in Poughkeepsie, there were of course a few who missed the boat, and probably came up on the Odell, which was docking at the same time and place.

The G. A. A. and the group of fellows, who were unaccompanied, appropriated a quarter of the boat to themselves and proceeded to have a generally active and mischievous time. They also executed an orderly snake dance up the Poughkeepsie hill.

Baseball Activities.

This afternoon at 2 o'clock the varsity team has set out to beat Eastman College at baseball, and thus wipe out the disgraceful defeat suffered last Wednesday, when at Saugerties our team was ignominiously defeated by a score of 13 to 5.

It seemed incredible that such a thing could happen immediately after vanquishing the big team of Albany and Troy but it was nevertheless the case.

Senior Notices.

The senior minstrels are well under way and it is expected that the graduating class will endeavor to pay off their grudge against the junior class by hitting them hard when the minstrels are presented next Friday.

The editor of the "Maroon" says that publication will be completed by the fifteenth and that it will be on sale Friday. There is much speculation as to the standard the class of '16 will set in this matter, although there is no doubt but that Fred Van Ritten will do his class proud by his efforts at journalism.

MENKE'S DAILY SPORTING LETTER

(By Frank G. Menke.)

New York, June 10.—Why don't you get in and join the little picking party that has been formed since articles were signed for a Frank Moran-Jack Dillon mill on June 29th? Everybody around here is doing it—and everyone is having a good time and getting a lot of relief in voicing opinions.

The fight which promises to be a hum-dinger surely is exciting quite a bit of chatter. As far as we have been able to figure out from the babel of voices, Moran is the slight favorite in the conversational betting. The folks think he's a bit too big for the "Giant Killer," and that the battle will be little other than a repetition of the Willard-Moran affair of some months ago.

The fight will bring together two battlers of the slugger type. Neither man is really in the scientific class. Both depend upon the wallop to win fights. Of the two, Dillon, when he wants to be, is far more aggressive. He is faster and naturally much shifter because of his fewer pounds. Moran can shoot out a powerful blow; so can Dillon. Both men are right handed wall-poppers. Neither has shown a man-killing left in the past.

Dillon is a greater fighter; undoubtedly the greatest warrior for his inches that the white race has produced. But can he "spot" Moran something like 30 or 35 pounds in weight, three or four inches in reach and over five inches in height—and still win? Yes, it's true that Dillon has beaten men as big and as powerful as Moran, but they were but second raters in comparison with Moran. Dillon is a "Giant Killer"—but can he kill off Moran?

It would seem to us that if Moran put up the same aggressive sort of fight against Dillon that he did against Willard, he cannot lose. Dillon can hit a powerful blow, but his zippers do not carry the same steam as those of Willard. The blond Pittsburgher, as you may recollect, stopped a lot of Willard's drives—and kept coming for more. If the 259 pound Willard couldn't knock out Moran what chance has the 170 pound Dillon?

Moran staggered Willard with a body punch in the seventh round of their memorable fight here; he backed him to the ropes with a crusher to the jaw. And throughout the fight he forced the champion to cover by his bombardments. If those same blows shot up against the frame of Dillon, who is about 12 inches shorter and about 90 pounds lighter than Willard, what will happen?

Moran's fighting weight is around 292; Dillon's is about 170. Moran has a reach of 78 inches and is 9 feet and 1 inch tall; Dillon's reach is somewhere in the neighborhood of 74 inches and he is only 5 feet 7 inches high. When you digest these figures you will note that Jawa Dillon has quite a job carved out for him in attempting to dispose of the said Mr. Moran.

Comparative showings sometimes are taken as a "tip-off" on the outcome of a fight. In 1911 Jim Savage stopped Frank Moran. Four years later Dillon outpointed Savage in a no-decision bout in New York. However, Savage, at that time, was about through as a ringster. Gunboat Smith won a 20 round decision fight from Moran in 1911, whereas Dillon claims to have shaded the Gunboat person when they met in Milwaukee in 1915. Jim Coffey wasn't able to knock out Charlie Weinert in ten rounds—but Dillon did it in two. Then Moran plunked Coffey twice for knockouts.

If fighters always ran true to form, Moran probably would go into the ring a big favorite, for the reason that he is as hard a hitter as Dillon, almost as good in the boxing line, and has as an advantage height, weight and reach.

But sometimes those fighting persons don't act as the folks who pay expect to see them act. Oftentimes they stage a burlesque when a serious drama is called for, frequently they just waddle around instead of rushing hither and yon, intermittently soaking each other on the snoot.

But, assuming that Messrs. Dillon and Moran fight as best they can, and fight just as if they hated each other an awful lot, the scrap ought to be a slashing affair, with Moran's height and bulk taking the advantage that Dillon has in greater speed, it ought to be a battle which should simmer down to one of those old fashioned slugger matches during which spectators use umbrellas to protect themselves from the flying gore.

It ought to be—but you know those boxing persons, Oscar.

KINGSTON PLAYS TROY SUNDAY

The fast Kingston team will clash with the All Professionals of Troy on Sunday afternoon at McVey's field on Delaware avenue and a good clean game may be expected by the "fans." The battery for Kingston will be Kism, Schirick and Cragin, and for Troy, Hammersley and Harrington. The visitors are considered one of the fastest teams in the upper section of the state.

This afternoon at Athletic Field Kingston was scheduled to play Tivoli, weather permitting.

Hot Liners.

(By Frank G. Menke.)

Winning their sixth straight the Browns took the Yankees into camp and sent them down a peg in the League race.

Jup put the jinx on the National League games again. And the players were sorry. Oh yes, every one is sorry to take a holiday.

The Tigers are coming along strong. With defeat staring them in the face they turned on the world's champs and forced a retreat.

Walter Johnson pitched the Nationals to within one game of the lead, when he forced the Indians to bow to his slants.

If this weather keeps on they might just as well take the leagues and play in southern climes.

Salvation Army Fire.

A fire, probably caused by defective wiring, did slight damage to the Salvation Army headquarters on North Front street shortly after 6 o'clock yesterday afternoon. An alarm from box 95 brought Weiner, Wiltwyck and Excelsior hose to the scene. The blaze was extinguished with chemicals.

Chief Wood Has Returned.

Police Chief J. Allan Wood, who has been attending the national convention of police chiefs at Newark, N. J., has returned home.

STREET GOSSIP ABOUT TOWN

"I wonder" said the street corner politician reflectively "I wonder if that two thousand word telegram that he would come to the convention if invited was sent collect by Teddy."

"The country faces a national crisis," he continued "and the only way out would be to organize a Universal Party and instead of electing one man president elect two men. Take those two perennial candidates, Roosevelt and Bryan, elect them and let them serve in shifts, one working nights for a week and the other days, and vice versa. Then split the salary question up by paying each $50,000 a year, and allow them two months vacation to work the Chautauqua circuit or camp along the River of Doubt."

"Yes" replied his companion "and then the Dove of Peace could use the Big Stick for a roost at night, while grape juice would become the universal beverage."

"But the only trouble with that scheme," said the street corner politician "would be that both would want to be elected for life." That could be overcome by inserting in the platform the recall of the presidents," replied the other politician.

Street gossip says that every night a negro attired only in running trunks may be seen darting about the city streets in his running costume, and that after covering several miles he winds up by plunging into the creek from the Mary Powell dock and swimming back and forth across the creek several times. They say that he is a prize fighter and is getting in training to fight the champion of Esopus, whoever that is.

Well at least no one can say that the weather is changeable these past few days for they have all been cloudy with plenty of rain drops.

One of Kingston's fishermen went fishing for eels on Friday and he caught a goodly mess and returned home shortly after seven o'clock with his catch which he placed in the kitchen sink over night. During the night some one rang his doorbell wishing to use the telephone to call a doctor and the fisherman jumped out of bed and hastened down stairs. That is he got about half way down the stairs when his bare feet struck something soft and slimy on the stairs and with and unceremoniously he leaped two feet in the air and fell down the stairs, but fortunately landed uninjured, but badly shaken up. He hastily struck a match and found that he had stepped on a live eel that was roaming about the house. After admitting the neighbor the fisherman went into the kitchen and found that his mess of eels had forsaken the sink and were traveling all about the house on a tour of investigation. He spent the remainder of the night rounding up the eels, and today he was not capable of doing much work, as he was somewhat sleepy to put it mildly.

DRUMMERS TOLD WHAT KILLS THEM

What modern sanitation in general and the state administration of the health department in particular are trying to do for the welfare of the traveling man was the subject of an address made this morning before the business session of the Grand Council, U. C. T., at the Elks' Home by Sanitary Supervisor Isaac W. Brewer. He presented statistics of mortality among commercial salesmen and told a lot of them just what ailed them. But his listeners bore up bravely and showed themselves to be men of iron constitution by the manner in which they have withstood the strenuous task of the three days' session in Kingston. Dr. Brewer spoke in part as follows:

The modern public health movement aims to "render growth more perfect, decay less rapid, life more vigorous and death more remote," and expects to reach that goal by education rather than coercion.

I think the question with most persons is—am I willing to pay the price of good health? To a large extent the payment must be made by abstinance and only a very little is represented by the cash taken from us by the tax collectors.

In your daily occupation you are exposed to certain dangers which are preventable if you only realize them and know how to prevent them, and I hope today to be able to point out to you some of these and the way of preventing them.

Our country has been somewhat backward in its health bookkeeping and consequently we are unable to tell you statistics covering the causes of sickness amongst the various classes of our people. The figures indicate that the greatest cause of death is tuberculosis and that heart disease, paralysis and apoplexy, Bright's disease, pneumonia and diseases of the digestive organs are amongst the more common causes of death.

It will also be seen that you suffer more from apoplexy and paralysis, diseases of the liver, other digestive diseases and Bright's disease than do other occupied males. Accidents cause less deaths amongst the traveling salesmen than amongst other occupied males, which raises the question as to whether you are not paying too much for your accident policies.

Consumption, according to the statistics, causes fewer deaths in this country amongst your members than it does amongst other occupied males. However, the percentage is entirely too high, more than one man in ten must die from a perfectly preventable disease. In your travels you are unnecessarily exposed to tuberculosis, especially in the smoking cars, the ordinary coaches, and in the stations. Tuberculosis is, as you all know, caused by a germ that is thrown off from the body of the sick in the expectoration. If the spit is allowed to dry and then the dust containing it is thrown into the air a person breathing that air is liable to infection. Is there anything in the life of a traveling man that makes him more liable to infection with the germs of tuberculosis? Many of them travel in the smoking car, where spitting is the rule. The heat of the car soon dries the spit and the currents of air caused by the opening of a door or window furnish the agitation necessary to make the air very dusty. Even in the first class coaches and in the sleepers spitting is far from uncommon. At the railroad stations where you are compelled to spend many hours, spitting on the floor is far from uncommon. I believe this spitting on trains and in and about stations is one of the causes of your high mortality from tuberculosis.

Only by concerted action of a large number of persons will we be able to correct these things. I will ask each of you to make a protest to the road whenever you see persons spitting on the floors of the cars or stations. A thousand letters from the traveling public to the railroads will make them correct the evil.

Bright's disease (kidney disease) causes about one-tenth of the deaths. It means a breaking down of the kidney which is one of the organs for eliminating the wastes of the body. We expect to find this disease amongst elderly persons but year by year it is attacking more and more of our young men and women. We believe that this is because of our habits of over eating and of eating highly seasoned foods. My observations have been that most persons travelling eat far too much. I think this applies to your profession. If you eat more than can be digested the incomplete products of the digestion must be passed out of the body through the kidneys and the bowels throwing an extra and unnecessary strain on them. This in time will cause the kidney to wear out. As a nation we should eat less and there should be a longer interval between our meals.

Diseases of the digestion, including diseases of the liver, cause about eight per cent of the deaths. The liver has many functions, one of which is the destruction of poisons that are generated during digestion. If it is overworked, it wears out and becomes diseased. Overeating and drinking are the principal causes of these diseases.

Diseases of the heart may be due to syphilis, but very commonly they follow rheumatism. There is not much that can be done for a heart that is injured unless that injury be caused by syphilis. In that case a cure can be expected in some cases, but much can be done to prolong life.

Diseases of the nervous system are on the increase in this country and we find that amongst the travelling men these diseases are 32 per cent more common than amongst other employed men of the same age. Whether this is due to the strain caused by the vibration of the trains I cannot say, but it would seem reasonable.

Of the nervous diseases we find that apoplexy and paralysis cause between eight and ten per cent of the deaths amongst travelling men. These diseases are closely connected with syphilis. The statistics from our state hospitals show that twenty per cent of the men admitted have parasites which is almost always due to syphilis. Studies of the blood of men applying for enlistment in the United States army has caused us to believe that about one man in five of that class have syphilis. I do not know how many travelling men have the disease or - any of your friends have had it I would urge upon you the importance of being treated until the reaction of your blood is negative. Otherwise you may live on to become insane or to suffer the tortures of locomotive ataxia, or have a stroke of apoplexy.

Pneumonia is spread much the same as tuberculosis and the precautions taken for that disease will prevent pneumonia also.

Typhoid fever causes from three to six per cent of the deaths. We would expect a much larger rate because the nature of your work takes you to places where safe water is not to be had, and not infrequently the dining rooms in which you are compelled to eat are infested with flies. You all know that the fly is reared in filth, loves filth and carries it with him at all times. One fly from a typhoid infected privy in your milk may cause you five weeks sickness if not your death. You should always protest when you find the dining room filled with flies. A little kicking will bring results for the landlord can always keep them out if he wishes to.

As you are almost always exposed to typhoid fever it would be the part of wisdom for every traveling man to take the preventive vaccine. In our army the use of this vaccine has eliminated typhoid fever. The state will furnish the vaccine free, through the local health officers and I would urge upon each of you the importance of taking this measure of protection for your life.

Those of us who travel occasionally owe a vote of thanks to the Commercial Travelers for the law that has made the sleeping cars and hotels provide long sheets. You should now devote the same energy to the enforcement of the law to prevent spitting and to the enforcement of the law against the common towel and the common drinking cup. The best results will be gotten if you make a personal protest to the proprietor, but you should also report the facts to the local health authorities or to the state department of health. You do not wish to use the towel that has been used by a syphilitic or a typhoid carrier.

Uses of Liquid Air.

Liquid air is poorly adapted to the uses which were suggested for it when it was first made in large quantities—that is, for refrigeration and for power. Its latent heat of evaporation is small and its specific heat is also small. It cannot compete with ammonia for refrigeration. It cannot be kept in a closed vessel, but must always have a vent to the air. For explosives many better materials are available. It is used to some extent to secure the oxygen of the air by first liquefying the air and then boiling off the nitrogen, which boils at a lower temperature than the oxygen.

"I suppose," ventured the interested friend of the family, "that John is still burning the midnight oil at college?" "Yes, indeed," responded the fond but puzzled mother, "but the college must furnish a very inferior quality of oil! STOLEN CAR FOUND IN KEMBLE CAMP

Dr. Urban T. Kemble Held for Grand Jury on Charge of Stealing an Automobile He Had Sold to Olivera Man.

Following the recovery of the seven passenger Hupmobile which was stolen from the barn of J. E. Bomsta at Olivera early Tuesday morning, Dr. Urban T. Kemble of this city, son of Dr. William Kemble, was arrested on a charge of grand larceny and before Justice of the Peace Theodore Voss at Phoenix Friday afternoon he was held to await the action of the grand jury on that charge and furnished bail in the sum of $1,000 with Charles Hubscher of Lake Katrine as surety. Bomsta has conducted a large boarding house at Olivera for some time. He married Mrs. Hilda, whose husband formerly conducted a hotel on the Saginaw river, who assists him in conducting the Olivera boarding house. The Hupmobile was purchased some time ago from Dr. Kemble, who is agent for that car in this vicinity, and after Bomsta had purchased and paid for the car he insured it against theft. The car was taken from the barn connected with the boarding house property at an early hour Tuesday morning and was brought to Kingston and later was driven to the Kemble fishing camp in the town of Denning, where it was recovered on Friday by Sheriff Shultis. Under Sheriff Hubscher and Jailer Jordan, who had been engaged on the case since the theft of the car was reported to them by Bomsta on Tuesday, Bomsta also had reported the theft of his machine to the insurance company. While near Lackawack at an early hour Friday morning, the sheriff's party met Kemble, who was returning to Kingston in an automobile. The Bomsta car was found at the Kemble camp.

The decorations of the home were pink and white carnations and the favors were the same. The game of hearts was played and the prize, a set of gold pins, went to Mrs. Ralph Eaton, who won at the games. The gifts to the young lady, who has won many friends during her stay in Ellenville, were very handsome, including several pieces of cut glass and silver. The hostess served very delicious refreshments which were coupled with a pleasant social hour. Miss Kinard's marriage is to be consummated in the near future.

TRAVELERS VISIT AT WEST POINT

The United States Military Academy at West Point was the mecca on Friday afternoon for some 700 delegates and visitors to the Grand Council convention who made a most enjoyable trip on the Mary Powell, leaving the dock on Ferry street shortly after 2 o'clock. The ride down the Hudson was a novelty to many of the passengers and the beauties of the Highlands were the cause of many enthusiastic tributes to the attractions offered by Kingston as a convention city.

At West Point the party debarked and witnessed the dress parade of the cadets, the ceremonies incident to the firing of the sunset gun and the countless objects of interest in the museum and at other places in the vicinity of this historic spot. All of the travelers were more than pleased with this excursion, patriotism being one of the tenets of the order. Entertainment on board the steamer included dancing, music and singing. A distinct hit was made by the presence of T. R. impersonated by Edward A. Spiegel of Freeport, L. I., one of the delegation whose members sport the huge oyster shell badges. Made up with Rough Rider hat and with spectacles and teeth true to the model, Mr. Spiegel was a great source of merriment. He came to the boat late, insisted on leading the band and made himself as important and swelled up as possible, quite as though it was Chicago and T. R. on deck instead of on the long distance phone. Mr. Spiegel excelled Roosevelt in one thing, he can sing. He gave a number of hyphenated dialect ditties, including his own composition, "Der Wash on the Line."

The boat trip was a highly enjoyable feature and popular with every visitor.

CONVENTION SIDE LIGHTS

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
Chicago, June 10.—Of all the flowery oratory spilled at the session of the Progressives, Edward R. Gurney of Florida exuded the most. "In the ancient days," he stated, after having made several flights. "Oh, go back to the flood, yelled a voice from the gallery and the laugh that followed put an end to the Florida delegate's session."

It was anything to kill time in the Moose convention. Rules of all sorts and of little meaning were promulgated in order that the time for nominating could be put off. The proceedings grew mighty monotonous. Finally this bulletin was passed around the press tables:

"George W. Perkins moved to take the North Pole into the party. It would help to keep the delegates cool and prevent the nomination of Teddy at this time."

When the roll was being called on the motion to take the Prohibition plank the Hawaiian delegation consisting of George D. Coffey arose and said: "The delegation from Hawaii is unanimous for prohibition but the delegation is also unanimous for tabling the plank."

F. M. Etheridge of Texas caused a sensation when he declared: "If the convention puts a Prohibition plank in the platform it might as well descend from its great leader to W. J. Bryan." The near sensation resulted from the fact that Mr. Bryan himself was believed to be in the hall. It was learned, however, that he had departed a short time before.

F. J. Hendershot of Ogden, Utah, has labored manfully to get his name into the papers—so here goes: At least a dozen times daily he arises and "doodles" a few popular airs such as "Yankee Doodle," "Dixie" and others of a similar character. He always carries his flute with him so that he can start something at any time.

The new spell-binders burst forth into bloom during the oratorical field exercises. Merle D. Vincent of Colorado was the first. He made a stirring, straight out Progressive campaign speech that brought the delegates to their feet yelling madly. The other was Doris Carroll, who hails from Minot, N. D. Here's the one he pulled that started him on his way to fame:

"I met a friend of mine who happened to be a Republican. He said, 'I hear you're chairman of your delegation.' I told him that I had that honor. 'Well,' says he, 'can you control your delegation?' 'I cannot,' I told him. 'I have trouble enough controlling myself.'"

The cheers that followed this were so strong that Carroll had to go to the stage and make a real address.

Nearly Threw Away Small Fortune.

Finding an old package in the cellar of her home at 216 Broadway, Newburgh, on Thursday, Mrs. Adam Kane was about to throw it into the stove, when it occurred to her to examine it. She did so and found it contained more than $200 in cash, several negotiable checks and two bank books on Newburgh banks, the whole value in the parcel aggregating $2,700.

Auto Breaks Man's Leg.

An Italian berry picker had his leg broken on Thursday as a result of being run into by the automobile of George Pratt of Highland. The accident happened at Atkins's corner. PROGRESSIVES HELD BACK BY PERKINS

Leader Urges Further Delay Pending Peace Negotiations with Republicans—Insurgent Progressives Call on Johnson to Lead.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
Auditorium, Chicago, June 10.—George W. Perkins, chairman of the executive committee of the Progressive party, held a long conference with the state chairmen of the Moose today and urged them to defer definite action in the convention pending the results of further peace negotiations with leaders of the Republican party. From Mr. Perkins's attitude, it was evident that the Progressive leaders were anxious to take no step that would cause the G. O. P. to decide immediately upon a candidate.

It developed at the conference that a movement which had been inaugurated to eliminate Theodore Roosevelt because the former president had not given the word to proceed, would have no success. The insurgent Progressives wanted Governor Hiram Johnson of California to become their standard bearer, but the governor squelched this scheme by declaring that he would not accept the nomination.

"Under no circumstances could I take the nomination," said Governor Johnson. "We are going to nominate Col. Roosevelt this morning, I hope."

"I regret very much that in some quarters my speech of last night was misinterpreted so as to make it appear that I, by inference, charged Col. Roosevelt with prospective corruption of the Progressive party. Nothing was farther from my intention."

Governor Johnson was then called into a conference of the leaders. The leaders were standing in an excited group while various members addressed them. Dean Lewis president of the meeting. Several of the state chairmen insisted upon an immediate nomination.

During the course of the meeting, Mr. Perkins and the members of the conference committee left for the Chicago Club to attend the conference sessions. He declined angrily to reply to the question as to whether or not Col. Roosevelt would decline the Moose nomination.

"You ought to know better than to ask me such a question," he said to his interviewers.

The meeting of the state chairmen adjourned as the members of the conference committee started for the Chicago Club, but the chairman remained at Perkins's headquarters to await the result of the peace committee's work.

While the chairmen awaited word from Perkins on the peace negotiation, they got into a row among themselves, many criticizing their leaders for trying to hold them back. The conflict became so hot that Davis Miller, chairman of the Florida delegation, and a strong Perkins man, bolted the meeting.

It said he would not tolerate the attacks made on Perkins.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
Rome, June 10.—An Italian transport with 1,000 troops on board, has been sunk in the Adriatic Sea by an Austrian submarine.

The transport was the Principe Umberto. The loss of life was very heavy. The admiralty announced the destruction of the transport in the following official statement:

"The Principe Umberto while conveying troops and war materials and while escorted by destroyers was attacked in the lower Adriatic by two Austrian submarines. She was struck by a torpedo and sunk in a few moments. Although prompt aid was rendered it is feared that half of the troops on board perished."

Leave the Decorations.

Officers of the Chamber of Commerce today expressed the hope that citizens and merchants who had decorated for the Commercial Travelers' convention would leave the decorations until next week as the convention of the Sons and Daughters of Liberty will convene at Knights of Pythias Hall, Wall and John streets, on that day for a three days session. About 300 delegates will be in attendance. As there is no local leg of the order in Kingston, all citizens are urged to extend courtesies to the visiting delegations.

Strangled to Death by Hook.

Masker of Amity, while playing about the house got hold of a hook which was used to fasten into a wall to hang up various articles and in some manner swallowed it. He died later at the Thrall Hospital at Middletown, where he was taken, from strangulation.

LEADERS REJECT ROOSEVELT OFFER

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Senators Smoot, Crane, Borah, Nicholas Murray Butler of New York and National Chairman Hill considered the matter.

Senator Borah afterward said: "Col. Roosevelt suggested Senator Lodge as a compromise candidate. After discussing the suggestion we agreed to notify Col. Roosevelt that conditions here made it impossible to nominate Senator Lodge."

Mrs. Vail is a resident of Ulster, but the complaint charges Vail with having deserted her in 1911 and having married Mae Porath, a resident of Poughkeepsie, who was working in Ulster at the time. It is stated that Miss Porath did not know Vail was married. Before going to Poughkeepsie to live the complaint says, they resided for a time at Highland. Joanna and the Family Fate

By ANNE O'HAGAN.
Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

It was the chief article of the Baxter family faith that frivolity ill becomes a woman. All the sisters of the Rev. Elijah Baxter had been serious minded—pioneer woman physicians, women college men, women suffragists, and the like. His wife, having no sisters, had concentrated the earnestness of a whole family in herself and had married the Rev. Elijah, than which no more conclusive evidence of seriousness could be imagined.

The Baxter girls up to Joanna had continued the family tradition fittingly. Cornelia had gone to Japan to convert the inhabitants of that island kingdom to her father's creed and had there married a brother missionary. Eliza taught mathematics in a western educational college. Sarah was the traveling delegate for the Society for the Suppression of Smokers, and Sophia had proved her entire spiritual kinship with the Baxters by marrying a widowed country doctor with seven small children.

When Joanna was born, twelve years after the youngest of her sisters, a baby had been too great a novelty in the paragon to escape undue petting. This fact was held later to account for much that worried and disheartened the Baxters.

When Joanna came home from college—she had steadfastly, even rebelliously, refused to attend the institution of learning in which Eliza taught mathematics—her parents looked at her with foreboding and at each other with dismay. From her smart stock to her smart shoe laces she seemed to them to radiate worldliness. They took prompt counsel together concerning her reformation. They divided the labor, having a premonition of its immensity.

"After you have talked with her seriously about her future," said Mrs. Baxter, "I will speak to her of her dress. Apparently it has been a great mistake to let her spend the last two vacations away from home and to let her buy her own clothes, but I did it for the best. How shall a young woman learn thrift and self reliance except by such methods?"

"Bring her to me," rumbled Joanna's father. Joanna floated into the study, all pink flounces and point d'esprit fichus. "Isn't this a duck of a negligee, mother dear?" she demanded. "And I've bought you one as pretty, all lavender lawn and white mull. And you've got to do your hair quite differently. I'll show you how."

"Joanna, your father wishes to talk seriously to you."

"I wish you'd call me Jo. All the girls do," remarked the young woman, curling a blown strand of her hair about a lead pencil from her father's desk.

The Rev. Elijah said a few words on the essential vulgarity of nicknames;

"JOANNA, WHAT CAREER, IF ANY, ATTRACTS YOU?"

then he came to the point of his discourse.

"Joanna, what career, if any, attracts you?"

At that Joanna shook a little chime of silver bells in her throat and laughed.

"A career? Me? Why, I got my degree only by the skin of my teeth. Worked on a sophomore mathematics condition only the week before graduation. Black coffee and a wet towel about my head three nights running!"

"Joanna."

Joanna looked startled.

"But that's the way we always crammed for exams," she said in hurt protest.

When Joanna's eyes showed hurt and her lips quivered not even the sense of the awful seriousness of life could keep her father to his discourse. He cleared his throat and said:

"There, there, we'll talk of that later."

When he had finally elicited the information that her "life work" was a subject to which Joanna had given no thought he sighed.

"I fear you do not take existence seriously enough, Joanna. You are twenty-two. You should have formulated some notion of what you wish to do to leave the world a better place than you found it."

"Oh, I dare say I'll get married some day," said Joanna casually. "Are there any amusing men in town?"

"Amusing?" gasped Mrs. Baxter. "Amusing?" thundered Mr. Baxter. Having thus precipitated the catastrophe, Joanna learned in three minutes that she was designed, in default of any nobler choice on her own part, as a helpmeet for the Rev. Lemuel Towers of Lucknow, India.

"He is at home on the first visit in eight years," said her father. "He is—his estimable first wife is no more. In the mission field a man needs a wife. He has been—er—impressed with your pictures and—er—what we have told him of your true character. He once met your sister Cornelia. He wishes an opportunity to win your regard."

Joanna had recovered her breath. "Stop!" she commanded imperiously. "It is horrible! How can you want to send me away from you, away from my home? And I won't marry him. I won't marry any minister! I won't! I hate them all—all but you, father!"

She began to sob tempestuously. Three days later, having contumaciously refused to make her appearance whenever the Rev. Lemuel Towers came to the paragon, she was shipped to Eliza in the Rocky mountains. Eliza had always had influence with her, her parents recalled thankfully.

"What is that man doing?" Joanna demanded of the stage driver in whose taciturn company she was finishing the journey to Eliza.

She indicated a stalwart figure standing astride of two rocks in the clear, rushing stream beside which the road twisted through the mountains.

"Fifishin'. Can't you see much as that?"

"Oh, of course," murmured Joanna, abashed. "I see the rod now."

At that second the fisherman wound his reel swiftly, and there flashed in the afternoon sunlight a glittering something at the end of the slender line.

"Good catch!" roared the stage driver above the rumble of his wheels and the foaming of the water. The fisherman looked up to wave an acknowledgment of the compliment; but, seeing Joanna, her slim body bent forward, her young face smiling and interested, he pulled his battered cap off his head and stared until the wagon disappeared at the next bend.

"Who is he?" asked Joanna.

"Dunno. Campin' a mile or two up here. Brought up his own things, so I didn't have no chance to get acquainted with him. Here we are." And he swung into sight of the picturesquely rough hotel where Eliza awaited her sister.

Perhaps her heart was a little heavy as she wandered alone the next morning through the woods behind the hotel. She made no effort to read the book which she had brought with her. On the spacious heights with yet higher peaks above and a crystalline blue-ness crowning all, with pines and aspens marshaled up and down the slopes and grasses and wild flowers and sun flecked shadows flooring all the mountains, mere existence was enough.

Hunger, of course, roused her from this Nirvanic ecstasy. She looked at her watch, sighed, arose and wandered back toward the hotel.

The trail seemed longer than she had remembered it, but she had a conviction that no other path had crossed it.

That conviction had gradually given way to doubt and that to desperation, when finally she saw ahead a gleam of canvas and the curling of smoke. A man bent over a fire, cooking.

"Tardoo me!" began Joanna clearly. The man turned—the tall, strong smooth shaven, homely fisherman of yesterday.

"Oh!" said Joanna simply. "It's you!"

"And you?" he answered kindly. Joanna blushed.

"I beg your pardon," she said formally. "I want to find my way back to the Cascade hotel. I was—or I thought I was—in the woods just behind it, but I seem to be astray."

"You are somewhat out of your road," he answered as formally. "But I shall be very glad to take you to the point where you took the wrong turn."

"The wrong turn?" mused Joanna. "The right turn?" declared the young man firmly.

They looked at each other and laughed.

"I don't want to interfere with your luncheon," Joanna began again politely. "If I could persuade you to share it," begged the young man deferentially. "I fear you will be too late for a decent meal at the Cascade House."

Joanna hesitated. She thought of the Rev. Elijah and her mother, of her array of excellent relatives and of the ordinary conventions of ordinary life. Then she looked about her, and she knew that this was not the world as she had known it. She deliberately brushed aside all other considerations.

"If you only would give me a bite," she said. "I'm starving!"

"Perhaps," he remarked tentatively as Joanna devoured trout with hot butter and coffee, "perhaps I had better introduce myself."

"Please don't," she begged or commanded. "I wish to pretend that things are all as I want them to be, and I can't if I have to know a lot of stupid facts. No. This is my own desert island—mountain then. I am a sort of Robinson Crusoe person, and you're just Friday."

"Your man Friday?"

Joanna had the grace to blush at this. She had the blush, however, behind a blush, which she consumed with great deliberation. Then she said:

"And now if you will be so kind as to set me on the road home I shall be very grateful."

Eliza's routine of study was very little interrupted during July, and as she wrote to her parents, Joanna seemed healthy and fairly contented, though occasionally pensive. One's spirits, however, she added reassuringly, were liable to be variable during the first part of one's residence in so high an altitude. Joanna had developed a fondness for fishing, Eliza regretted to inform them, as she herself bewailed all slaughter of animals, whether for sport or food. Joanna also took long walks, sometimes with the other guests at the hotel, more often alone. Doubtless in the opportunities for reflection thus afforded her she was reaching conclusions concerning her future.

A few weeks later Joanna was walking with quick, nervous, determined steps through the wood behind the hotel. As she swung into the path toward the camp of the man Friday she flushed to her temples. She kept repeating to herself what a woman on the piazza had said last night—the sort of young person who picks up acquaintances in haphazard style.

She walked on bravely and directly. She had never gone unaccompanied beyond the crossroads since the first day. He had always met her, by a happy chance, somewhere on the hills.

He looked up at the sound of her approach and sprang to his feet to come hastily and happily toward her.

"You said yesterday that you would not come out with me today," he cried, "or I should have been lurking about in the woods."

"I know. But I've come." She spoke heavily and paused. Then she hurried on quickly.

"I've just come to my senses," she said. "I've been crazy—this last month—crazy with freedom and obstinacy."

"You've been the most!"

"No, no. Don't stop me. I want to say it all and go away. I've acted the way I have, I've flunked with you, fished with you, tramped with you, a stranger, out of bravado and—"

"Was it nothing but bravado?" asked the man Friday, very pale himself now.

"Oh, yes! The sweetness of it, the beauty of it—I can't say what I mean, but it was like dewy mornings. Oh, I've liked it, I've liked it very much and it never seemed to me for a minute horrid and common and vulgar. But last night I began to see how you must think of it, of me?"

"Have I done anything to make you believe that I thought anything unworthy of?" he hesitated and looked at her, then looked around him—"of this?"

"What I think of you now I shall think of you always. And that is this—oh, child, don't you know? That you are the one woman for me—the one woman? If you reproach yourself for our meetings I am to blame. I should have told you who I was, should have gone to that gossiping old hostess of yours and met you with all the ritual, hang it, I should not have done anything of the sort! Why should I have spoiled an idyl? I didn't want you to know who I was at first. It makes an immediate difference in people's attitudes to learn that one is a clergyman. I wanted to be just a fellow human for a while—just a man. What is the matter, child, my dear?"

AND NO WATER WAS SPILLED.

Variety on Parade Program at Broadway and Downs Street.

What one traveling man said was the only variation from the water that has been spilled regularly on their three days' session occurred this morning a few moments before the parade reached Broadway and Downs street. There the inevitable small boy had been on hand with an express wagon which contained a twenty quart can of milk. He negotiated the corner in accordance with traffic rules but failed on the curb, the wagon going over and the milk spilling like a miniature Niagara into the sewer. The lad mingled his tears with the lactical fluid and was so startled that he could not even right the can. This was done for him by an obliging copper and with about six quarts remaining of his original cargo the boy went on his way though not rejoicing.

HIGH SCHOOL NEWS NOTES

Last evening the junior class of the high school entertained the graduating class with a cheerful, if not a moonlight trip to Poughkeepsie on the steamer Gardner. Had the weather conditions been more favorable there would probably have been a hundred and eighty revelers but as it was there were one hundred and ten who went. The affair would perhaps have been postponed had not the committee in charge put the question to a vote at a joint meeting of the upper classes, who decided to go, in spite of the damp weather. The boat was not crowded so that the young people were able to do practically anything they pleased. The safety and well being of the students were well guarded by Miss Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Service and Miss Seigel, who were kind enough to forego their own pleasures to assure a properly conducted call.

The boat left promptly at 7 o'clock as arranged and reached the Bridge City at nine. It was necessary to start back at ten o'clock in order to stem the tide and still reach the special trolley that was waiting at the end of the line at 12 o'clock. Although the boat waited several extra minutes for the delinquents in Poughkeepsie, there were of course a few who missed the boat, and probably came up on the trolley which was docking at the same time and place.

The G. A. A. and the group of fellows who were unaccompanied, appropriated a quarter of the boat to themselves and proceeded to have a generally active and mischievous time. They also executed an orderly snake dance up the Poughkeepsie hill.

Baseball Activities.

This afternoon at 2 o'clock the varsity team has set about to beat Eastman College at baseball, and this will be the disgraceful defeat suffered last Wednesday, when at Saugerties our team was ignominiously defeated by a score of 13 to 5.

It seemed incredible that such a thing could happen immediately after vanquishing the big team of Albany and Troy but it was nevertheless the case.

Senior Notes.

The senior minstrels are well under way and it is expected that the graduating class will endeavor to pay off their grudge against the junior class by hitting them hard when the minstrels are presented next Friday.

The editor of the "Maroon" says that publication will be completed by the fifteenth and that it will be on sale Friday. There is much speculation as to the standard the class of '16 will set in this matter, although there is no doubt but that Fred Van Buren will do his class proud by his efforts at journalism.

MENKE'S DAILY SPORTING LETTER

(By Frank G. Menke.)

New York, June 10.—Why don't you get in and join the little picking party that has been formed? Since articles were signed for a Frank Moran-Jack Dillon mill on June 29th? Everybody around here is doing it—and everyone is having a good time and getting a lot of relief in voicing opinions.

The fight which promises to be a hum-dinger surely is exciting quite a bit of chatter. As far as we have been able to figure out from the babel of voices, Moran is the slight favorite in the conversational class. The folks think he's a bit too big for the "Giant Killer," and that the battle will be little other than a repetition of the Willard-Moran affair of some months ago.

The fight will bring together two battlers of the slugkin' type. Neither man is really in the scientific class. Both depend upon the wall to win fights. Of the two, Dillon, when he wants to be, is far more aggressive. He is faster and naturally much shiffter because of his fewer pounds. Moran can shoot out a powerful blow; so can Dillon. Both men are right handed wall-poppers. Neither has shown a man-killin' left in the past.

Dillon is a greater fighter; undoubtedly the greatest warrior for his inches that the white race has produced. Like can he "spot" Moran something like 30 or 35 pounds in weight, three or four inches in reach and over five inches in height—and still win? Yes, it's true that Dillon has beaten men as big and as powerful as Moran, but they were but second raters in comparison with Moran. Dillon is a "Giant Killer"—but can he kill off Moran?

It would seem to us that if Moran put up the same aggressive sort of fight against Dillon that he did against Willard, he cannot lose. Dillon ran hit a powerful blow, but his zippers do not carry the same steam as those of Willard. The blond Pittsburgher, as you may recollect, stopped a lot of Willard's drives—and kept coming for more. If the 250 pound Willard couldn't knock out Moran what chance has the 170 pound Dillon?

Moran staggered Willard with a body punch in the seventh round of their memorable fight here; he backed him to the ropes with a crusher to the jaw. And throughout the fight he torred the champion to cover by his bombardments. If those same blows shot up against the frame of Dillon, who is about 12 inches shorter and about 90 pounds lighter than Willard, what will happen?

Moran's fighting weight is around 202; Dillon's is about 170. Moran has a reach of 78 inches and is 6 feet 1 inch tall; Dillon's reach is somewhere in the neighborhood of 74 inches and he is only 5 feet 7 inches high. When you digest these figures you will note that Jawn Dillon has quite a job to do in attempting to dispose of the said Mr. Moran.

Comparative showings sometimes are taken as a "tip-off" on the outcome of a fight. In 1911 Jim Savage stopped Frank Moran. Four years later Dillon outpointed Savage in a no-decision bout in New York. However, Savage, at that time, was about through as a ringster. Gunboat Smith won a 20 round decision fight from Moran in 1911, whereas Dillon claims to have shaded the Gunboat person when they met in Milwaukee. In 1915, Jim Coffey wasn't able to knock out Charlie Weinert in ten rounds—but Dillon did it in two. Then Moran plunked Coffey twice for knockouts.

If fighters always ran true to form, Moran probably would go into the ring a big favorite, for the reason that he is as hard a hitter as Dillon, almost as good in the boxing line, and has as an advantage height, weight and reach.

But sometimes those fighting persons don't act as the folks who pay expect to see them act. Oftentimes they stage a burlesque when a serious drama is called for, frequently they just waddle around instead of rushing hither and yon, intermittently soaking each other on the snoot. But, assuming that Messrs. Dillon and Moran fight as best they can, and fight just as if they hated each other and awed lot, the scrap ought to be a slashing affair, with Moran's height and bulk taking the advantage that Dillon has in greater speed, it ought to be a battle which should simmer down to one of those old fashioned slugkin' matches during which spectators use umbrellas to protect themselves from the flying sore.

It ought to be—but you know those boxing persons, Oscar.

KINGSTON PLAYS TROY SUNDAY

The fast Kingston team will clash with the All Professionals of Troy on Sunday afternoon at McVey's field on Delaware avenue and a good clean game may be expected by the "fans." The battery for Kingston will be Kissam, Schirrick and Cragin, and for Troy, Hammersley and Harrington. The visitors are considered one of the fastest teams in the upper section of the state.

This afternoon at Athletic Field Kingston was scheduled to play Tivoli, weather permitting.

Hot Liners.

(By Frank G. Menke.)

Winning their sixth straight game, the Browns took the Yankees into camp and sent them down a peg in the League race.

Jup put the jinx on the National League games again. And the players were sorry. Oh yes, every one is sorry to take a holiday.

The Tigers are coming along strong. With defeat staring them in the face they turned on the world's champs and forced a retreat.

Walter Johnson pitched the Nationals to within one game of the lead, when he forced the Indians to bow to his slants.

If this weather keeps on they might just as well take the leagues and play in southern climes.

Salvation Army Fire.

A fire, probably caused by defective wiring, did slight damage to the Salvation Army headquarters on North Front street shortly after 6 o'clock yesterday afternoon. An alarm from box 95 brought Weiner, Wilfrevy and Excelsior hose to the scene. The blaze was extinguished with chemicals.

Chief Wood Has Returned.

Police Chief J. Allan Wood, who has been attending the national convention of police chiefs at Newark, N. J., has returned home.

STREET GOSSIP ABOUT TOWN

"I wonder" said the street corner politician reflectively "I wonder if that two thousand word telegram that he would come to the convention if invited was sent collect by Teddy."

"The country faces a national crisis," he continued "and the only way out would be to organize a Universal Party and instead of electing one man president elect two men. Take those two perennial candidates, Roosevelt and Bryan, elect them and let them serve in shifts, one working nights for a week and the other days, and vice versa. Then split the salary question up by paying each $50,000 a year, and allow them two months vacation to work the Chautauqua circuit or camp along the River of Doubt."

"Yes" replied his companion "and then the Dove of Peace could use the Big Stick for a roost at night, while grape juice would become the universal beverage."

"But the only trouble with that scheme," said the street corner politician "would be that both would want to be elected for life."

That could be overcome by inserting in the platform the recall of the presidents," replied the other politician.

Street gossip says that every night a negro stilted only in running cranks may be seen darting about the city streets in his running costume, and that after covering several miles he winds up by plunging into the creek from the Mary Powell dock and swimming back and forth across the creek several times. They say that he is a prize fighter and is getting in training to fight the champion of Esopus, whoever that is.

Well at least no one can say that the weather is changeable these past few days for they have all been cloudy with plenty of rain drops.

One of Kingston's fishermen went fishing for eels on Friday and he caught a goodly mess and returned home shortly after seven o'clock with his catch which he placed in the kitchen sink over night. During the night some one rang his doorbell, wishing to use the telephone to call a doctor and the fisherman jumped out of bed and hastened down stairs. That is he got about half way down the stairs when his bare feet struck something soft and slimy on the stairs and with an unearthly yell he leaped two feet in the air and fell down the stairs, but fortunately landed uninjured, but badly shaken up. He hastily struck a match and found that he had stepped on a live eel that was roaming about the house. After admitting the neighbor the fisherman went out into the kitchen and found that his mess of eels had forsaken the sink and were traveling all about the house on a tour of investigation. He spent the remainder of the night rounding up the eels, and today he was not capable of doing much work, as he was somewhat sleepy to put it mildly.
